TROOPS BREAK MINE SIEGE

PARAGUAY AND BOLIVIA WARNED BY 19 NATIONS

Refuse to Recognize Gains Made by War.

[Copyright, 1932: By the New York Times.]

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 3.—Paraguay started an attack on the Bolivian Fort Camacho this morning, according to persistent rumors here. No details or official confirmation could be obtained.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—A blunt warning that the American republics will not recognize the validity of territorial acquisition won in the Gran Chaco by force of arms was served on the governments of Bolivia and Paraguay today by nineteen American nations.

The warning was contained in a formal declaration signed by diplomatic representatives of the American nations at Washington today and forwarded to Bolivia and Paraguay. In this declaration the American republics invited the governments of Bolivia and Paraguay to cease hostilities at once in their controversy over the Gran Chaco.

"The American nations further declare," the joint declaration said, "that they will not recognize any territorial arrangement which has not been obtained by peaceful means nor the validity of territorial acquisitions which may be obtained through occupation or conquest by force of arms."

All American Nations Sign.

Diplomatic representatives of every nation in South and Central America, with the exception of Bolivia and Paraguay, signed the joint declaration in the presence of Undersecretary of State William R. Castle. The announcement that the neutral powers would not recognize as legal territorial rearrangements brought about by force of arms marked the beginning of what may turn out to be a new peace policy for this hemisphere.

State department officials today recalled that Secretary of State Stimson had followed a somewhat similar policy in dealing with the Manchurian crisis last spring, when he notified Japan that the United States would not recognize as legal any territorial arrangements in Manchuria brought about in violation of international treaties. At this time, however, Secretary Stimson invoked the Kellogg anti-war pact. Today the Kellogg pact was not mentioned in the declaration put out by the American republics.

Troops Off for Front.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Three hundred volunteers, anxious to see service against Bolivia in the Gran Chaco, almost swamped the first transport carrying troops to the scene of the conflict when the ship started up the Paraguay river today.

These aspirants for battle, reflecting the same patriotic fervor that has swept through the women of Paraguay, stormed the vessel, on which were loaded 500 soldiers. The departure of the ship was delayed while the men were shoved ashore.

Hundreds of women, from society girls to burly peasant women, besieged the government offices, declaring that they, too, had the right to go to war. They demanded active service at the front. Government officials pointed out that in the deep Chaco wilderness even the mildest noncombatant service is too severe for women.

Some 1,200 men reached the capital in answer to a general mobilization order signed by President Guggiari last night. For the most part they were schoolboys and college students.

Bolivia Orders Mobilization.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Bolivia informed the league of nations today that she "does not decline" pacific solution of her controversy with Paraguay over the Gran Chaco territory, and at the same time the nation prepared for the eventuality of war.

It was understood that Bolivia had found certain clauses unacceptable in the note received today from the neutral American nations, but that it would not object to peaceful means for a definite termination of the controversy. It was said in informed quarters the government's reply would raise serious objections to some of the clauses.

Matching Paraguay's general mobilization order, the government called to the colors all classes between the ages of 22 and 29 and summoned all retired army officers between 20 and 50 years old to active duty.

BONUS SEEKING ARMY DISBANDS; SENT TO HOMES

'Evacuation Trains' Leave Johnstown.

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The bonus expeditionary force, which camped here 9,000 strong after President Hoover routed them from Washington, agreed today to disband and go home. They were licked and they knew it, although in all the high flown oratory that was used to persuade them to go quietly no reference was made to this painful fact. The first two "evacuation trains" bearing the California and Chicago contingents homeward left tonight.

Their national commander, Walter W. Waters, in ordering his "army" to disperse, said: "We can best effect our purpose by returning to the states from which we came."

George Atwell, former commander of one of the Washington camps which is no more, read the national commander's orders to his troops for Waters, who remained in Washington.

McCloskey Checks Revolt.

Doak Carter, who had resigned as Waters' chief of staff, led a short lived rebellion against the national commander's surrender, and he might have succeeded in holding the purposeless stragglers together if it had not been for Mayor Eddie McCloskey, who exercised the prerogative of a host whose guests have stayed too long. Mayor Eddie gave an exhibition that would have made Senator Huey P. Long, the Louisiana kingfish, turn green with envy.

The mayor said that all those who agreed to go quietly would ride home free on trains, whether they came from California or the Panama Canal Zone. He promised food in abundance, and to the hungry men and women he talked temptingly of steak and lambs chops waiting at journey's end.

Veterans Agree to Go.

He warned that the lean rations would grow leaner, that women would suffer and babies die, and he declared that those who hesitated in making their decision might have to travel homeward on shanks' mare.

It was a convincing argument, and when he called for a show of hands most of the campers, who only a few minutes before had been talking boldly about "sitting tight till we're carried out," raised their arms high above their heads.

Just to be sure that nobody changed his mind at the last minute, Mayor McCloskey telephoned Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of state police, to have state troopers on hand tomorrow morning when the main homeward movement is scheduled to begin on special trains.

Mayor Silent on Funds.

The mayor admitted that he had not accomplished the miracle of free transportation unaided, but he left the source of the funds for the demobilization unexplained. However, it was reported on excellent authority the Bethlehem Steel company, which has giant mills here and is the mainstay of the city's industrial life, had furnished the money.

In some quarters it was asserted that the mayor had very little to do with either the dispersal of the B. E. F. or provisions for the transportation of its members. The plans were completed and presented to him and he was prevailed upon to act to get rid of his unwelcome guests.

Plan of Evacuation.

Local business men, already swamped by the demands made upon them by the city's own 8,000 unemployed steel and mine workers, have opposed the bonus army's invasion of Johnstown since the mayor issued his invitation to the veterans to squat on Milan Dicklich's amusement park, which is neither in McCloskey's city nor in his county.

The plan is to run several special trains into a siding at Ferndale, which is about one mile from Camp McCloskey, and there to load the demobilized army into passenger cars with the mayor, his friends and the state police to wish them godspeed. The mayor and the satellites of Waters are hoping that the state police won't

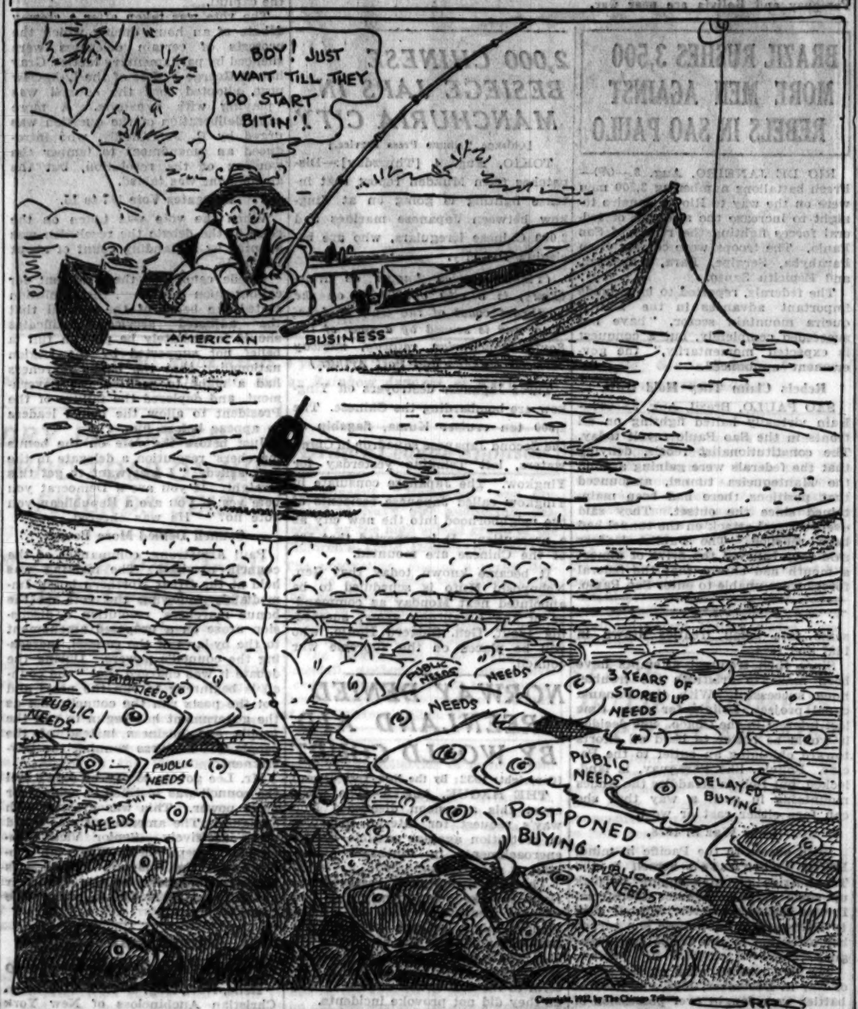
SOMETHING TO ANTICIPATE



EDDIE PLAYS A TUNE OF "TROW 'EM DOWN M'CLOSKEY" ON CHINS

Trow 'em down, McCloskey!
Ye kin do it if you try.
Trow 'em down, McCloskey!
That was the battle cry.

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The few members of the bonus army who didn't want to listen to Mayor Eddie McCloskey's speech ordering them to move out of their camp here today ran into a stronger argument—Mayor Eddie's fists.

As he began to speak an angry veteran interrupted sarcastically. The pint sized red headed mayor leaped over two rows of his audience and landed a couple of stiff straight rights on the heckler's chin.

The veterans pressed close and there was much muttering.

Brushing himself off, Mayor Eddie replaced his straw hat at its usual cocky angle and laughed at those who threatened him.

"I want to tell you mugs something before I begin my speech," he snapped, "and that is that I can lick anybody in this damned outfit. If you don't think so, just start something."

Somebody did. And Mayor Eddie flattened him, too. This prompted Red Donlin, the camp bugler, to say:

"Listen, fellows, this guy can keep this up all day. Let's pipe down. We're not getting anywhere!" So they let Mayor Eddie go into his oratory.

When he came to his offer to provide transportation there were a few dissenters.

"Then you bums can walk," said the little mayor, "and I'll personally escort you out of town tomorrow to see you get a damned good start. I won't call in any state troopers—I'll put you to hell out myself."

ROBBER DROPS SLIP OF PAPER; POLICE GET HIM

A slip of paper bearing a telephone number led to the arrest last night of John Frink, 24 years old, as a robber. He came to Chicago from Tennessee two weeks ago. Early yesterday Frink held up John P. Hohenadel, 3 East Pearson street, cashier, in the Pixley & Ehler restaurant, 808 West Madison street, and got $60. After Frink had left the cashier found the slip of paper on the floor. He turned it over to Detectives Patrick McHale and Owen Lynch of the Des Plaines street station.

They traced the telephone number to a young woman, who directed them to 1031 Irving Park boulevard, where Frink roomed. McHale and Lynch arrested him as he was sitting serenely in a bath tub. In his room they found a toy pistol which he had used in the holdup. He was identified by Hohenadel, and also confessed.

Disarm, Then Cancel Debts, Borah Urges

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Cancellation of European debts owed the United States in return for a permanent policy of disarmament was urged in an address here tonight by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho. He said the combination of the two things, together with disposal of the reparations question, will return world prosperity.

Unless Europe agrees to disarmament, cancellation should not be considered, he said. He then proposed that at the world economic conference now being planned the United States unhesitatingly insist that war debts, reparations, and disarmament be given prominent places in the subjects to be discussed.

Business Confidence Broken.

Failure to disarm has broken the confidence of business in every section of the world and a definite program of disarmament will be the first means of permanently insuring a return of confidence and of prosperity, he told the Minneapolis branch of the Foreign Policy association in his address at the University of Minnesota.

More than 5,000 persons heard him with several thousand others turned away from the doors because of lack of room.

"There is a greater need for leadership among the nations today than leadership among individuals which I often hear raised as the real need," the senator said. "The United States has and should lead efforts to disarm, but my country cannot disarm until others do.

"You cannot put eight million men or more now unemployed in this country to work by passing bills in Washington," the senator said.

Tariff Walls Involved.

"The entire matter goes deeper. It goes into the load of reparations which Germany was forced to bear and which had the effect of raising tariff walls in every country which made it impossible for Germany to pay by increasing its production, lowering the standards of its wage earners, and paying its obligations in kind or by goods.

"If I were elected President," the senator said, "I would recognize Russia the next day." He was answering a question.

"Of course, it is a big economic question. In fact, by recognizing Russia is one way I would destroy communism in Russia."

"There are two courses for the United States to pursue under present conditions," he asserted. "First, to become the leader and to dispose of the problems coming from the world war by outright action.

"The second course is for this country to withdraw as far as possible from European affairs. I don't believe that this just now is a practical course. I doubt if the world ever faced a situation where there was so much of human misery. The question of humanity is involved—and it calls for leadership."

LADY LUCK GIVES JOLIET SHOE MAN COUPLE OF BOOTS

"Have you any good shoes?" one of the men inquired. Stonich invited them inside, where one of the men drew a revolver. They took $5, fifteen shirts, two suits, three dozen socks, two dozen ties, and a gross of handkerchiefs and fled.

Stonich was standing in front of the store yesterday morning, when a man approached and looked in the window. He turned to Stonich and asked: "Have you any good shoes?" Stonich called the police and the inquirer quickly convinced them that he really wanted to buy shoes. He went elsewhere to buy them.

Lamont Quits Cabinet Post; Chapin Named

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The White House today announced the retirement from the Hoover cabinet of Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont of Chicago and the selection of Roy D. Chapin, Detroit automobile manufacturer, as his successor. The cabinet change is to take place within the next few days.

In announcing the resignation President Hoover said that Mr. Lamont had found it necessary to resign in order to reënter private business.

Accepts Industrial Post.

According to close friends of the secretary, Mr. Lamont advised the President some days ago that he could no longer make the financial sacrifices necessitated by his remaining in the cabinet. It is reported that Secretary Lamont has accepted a high salaried position in a large industrial concern. The President's statement read:

"Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont has found it necessary to resign in order to reënter private business.

"Mr. Lamont has remained in its position at great sacrifice for several months at my request. I regret extremely his loss from the cabinet, as his abilities and service have commanded the respect and confidence of the entire country."

Chairman of Hudson Board.

Mr. Chapin has been chairman of the board of the Hudson Motor company since 1923. Prior to that time he was president of the Hudson company. He was president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in 1927 and 1928. Born in Lansing, Mich., in February, 1880, he is 52 years old. He is married and lives at Grosse Pointe farms, Michigan.

The new secretary of commerce has been a friend of President Hoover for many years. A lifelong Republican, he was active in working for the Hoover-Curtis ticket in 1928. Mr. Chapin arrived in Washington today and conferred for some time with President Hoover. Later he expressed the belief that business conditions were improving.

Former Steel Executive.

Reports that Mr. Lamont would retire have been current for several weeks. His resignation marks the fourth change made in the Hoover official family since the President assumed office. Secretary of War James W. Good died and was succeeded by Patrick J. Hurley, William N. Doak took over the labor portfolio held by James J. Davis, now a senator from Pennsylvania, and Secretary Mellon resigned to become ambassador to Great Britain and was succeeded by Ogden Mills.

REPORT NEW YORK POSITION.

Close friends of Mr. Lamont in Chicago said they understood that a large industrial concern with which he has accepted a connection is located in New York. Commenting on Washington dispatches saying that Mr. Lamont could no longer make the sacrifices necessary to remain in public life, Chicago friends said his security holdings had greatly depreciated. Mr. Lamont's principal business interest before he accepted the cabinet position was the American Steel Foundries, in which he was a heavy stockholder. Stock in this concern has dropped from $63 to $7 a share and no dividends are being paid on the common.

Mrs. Lamont and her daughter, Mrs. Charles Saltzman, are motoring to Chicago from Washington and are expected today for a visit with Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, Mrs. Silas Strawn, and other friends.

STILL RAIDED BY FAKE DRYS, THEN BY REAL AGENTS

A still near Joliet was raided twice yesterday, first by bogus prohibition agents and a few hours later by legitimate agents. It could not be learned whether the first raiders collected any money, but the regular agents took the entire still.

The first raid was made by four men led by a tall, well dressed man who displayed a government badge. All carried guns. They are believed to be the same gang who obtained $500 from Jake Horwath, a Joliet saloonkeeper, last week by posing as federal agents and promising him protection in return for the payment.

The plant seized yesterday was on Maple road about two miles east of Joliet. The still, according to the dry agents, had a daily capacity of 200 gallons of alcohol. The land on which the plant was found, according to the agents, belongs to Ladd Hurd, whose home is across the road. Hurd was not home yesterday.

UNION PICKETS FLEE AS ARMY MOVES TO SCENE

78 Workers Rescued; Four Wounded.

BY PERCY WOOD.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 4 (3 a. m. Thursday).—Seventy-eight miners, four of them wounded, and one woman, who had been besieged in the Dixie Bee coal mine for nearly 48 hours by 4,000 union pickets, with whom they had waged a continual gun battle, were rescued early this morning by state troops.

The rescue was effected without a shot being fired. When the soldiers arrived at 12:30 o'clock this morning the scene was deserted. The pickets, who less than an hour before numbered at least 4,000 and who still were firing upon the beleaguered band, had vanished like mist before the sun.

The arrival of the troops ended a situation which had grown more menacing each hour, a situation which cost two lives and resulted in eight men being wounded.

250 Troops on Hand.

First troops reached Terre Haute yesterday afternoon and by late last night 250 were present out of an expected 850. During the first hours of mobilization planes flew over the battleground. Col. Paul Sieberling, commanding the contingent, inspected the scene. This morning he ordered the rescue.

The 250 guardsmen, including a machine gun squad, boarded eight military trucks, and started from here to the mine, near Pimento, 10 miles south. Even as they left, the pickets still were firing on the imprisoned miners. Word of the coming of the military raced ahead of them, however, and when they reached the mine area all was quiet. Not a picket was seen.

Story of Troops' Advance.

Three blocks from the mine wash shed, where the beleaguered men were, the guardsmen halted. A bugler sounded officers' call and all the officers on the trucks advanced on foot to the first truck for a brief council of war with Col. Sieberling. Then the machine gun squad assembled on foot. Meanwhile, glaring searchlights from the trucks illuminated the mine fortress. The officers and machine gun squad advanced, followed by several squads of infantry.

Suddenly two figures, carrying long rifles, emerged from the mine tipple. They were Louis Rogers and Edward Butler, son of the mine superintendent. In a moment they were joined by ragged, exhausted men. There was no cheering, only grim silence. In the background, near her husband, stood Mrs. Thelma Thompson, wife of Bid Thompson, stable manager, the sole woman among the besieged.

"I'm so happy you've come," she sobbed gladly to the troops. "I've been hiding in one of the boilers. All day long I could hear the thump of bullets against the building."

The Four Wounded.

The four wounded miners were brought out and rushed in a military vehicle to Terre Haute. The men are Elmer Bedwell of Sullivan, shot in the elbow; Claude Grable, also of Sullivan, shot in the leg; Glenn Brossman, likewise of Sullivan, hit in the knee, and John Fullman of Terre Haute, shot in the abdomen. His condition was serious and he may die. All suffered for lack of medical aid. Capt. Frederick Warfle of Indianapolis treated them on the spot.

Following the rescue, Col. Sieberling furnished military escorts to the other miners to their homes. He established patrols around the mine, and at extended posts. The guards will remain on duty today.

The beleaguered men told Col. Sieberling that their siege was rendered more difficult by the lack of food and water, both of which ran out early in the fight. This worked a double hardship on the wounded.

The troops were rushed into the area late yesterday under the martial law order of Gov. Harry G. Leslie.

City Was an Armed Camp.

During the afternoon and evening Terre Haute took on the appearance of a cantonment. Troops were being carried through the streets in trucks to the headquarters hastily established in the state normal school.

Shotgun and rifle fire had been heard at intervals during the day and a portion of route 41, a principal western Indiana highway, was blocked off at the point where it bends in toward the picket hiding places to avoid possible accidents from stray bullets. The troops were not used for this duty, state highway police taking control.

Arriving by plane just at dusk, Col. Bieberling issued hasty preliminary orders, then climbed back into the ship and made a lengthy reconnaisance flight over the Dixie Bee. He reported that the pickets seemed scattered with no general concentration point.

Trouble of Long Standing.

Brewing for months, the union versus nonunion war broke into full flame late Tuesday. Fully 5,000 pickets, the authorities estimated, surrounded the mine shaft where the nonunion workers were gathered in a defense group and for nine hours turbulent warfare reigned over the mine tract and the nearby fields. One picket, Taylor Kellar, 24 years old, of Linton, Ind., was fatally wounded and four of his fellows suffered serious hurts.

Beaten back by the onslaught of numbers, the nonunion miners took refuge in the wash house, dragging four of their wounded comrades with them. Various reports circulated last night that two or more of these men had died during the day, but this had not been authenticated. Prosecuting Attorney Charles C. Whitlock and Sheriff Joseph Wrehrer, who were greeted with bullets when they attempted the rôle of peacemakers, then renewed their plea for troops and Gov. Leslie responded.

Spasmodic firing yesterday morning signalized the determination of the miners to continue the siege. Shots spattered against the brick walls of the wash house where the embattled nonunion workers had spent the night.

Throughout most of the morning the besiegers took pot shots at windows and the door of the wash house from their place of concealment. A cornfield which pushes close to the shaft house and tipple on the south provided an excellent hiding place, as it did during the guerrilla warfare the day before. Occasionally the men in the mine returned the fire.

So far as could be learned no additional casualties occurred during the morning fighting.

Mine Boss Pleads for Troops.

Half frantic with worry, Ralph Butler, the mine superintendent, dashed off to Indianapolis to plead once more with Gov. Leslie to send troops into Vigo county. Butler had three sons among the wash house defenders and a report reached him early yesterday morning that the pickets were bent on "getting" four of the men in the fortress and contenting themselves with "beating up" the others. Mr. Butler feared the pickets were vowing vengeance upon him and his sons.

As the sun mounted the pickets began to increase their numbers—truck loads appearing upon the highways and discharging their cargoes at the mouth of the lane leading to the mine.

Reporter Flies Over Mine.

Denied entrance to the mine property and contiguous territory by the pickets in no uncertain terms, a TRIBUNE reporter and photographer chartered an airplane to fly over the mine. Pilot Clarence Dowden circled the site for thirty minutes at an altitude of 1,500 feet.

"I'll not fly lower," he said quietly before the flight. "Yesterday these fellows fired at the sheriff and the prosecuting attorney of the county; they'd have no compunction over taking potshots at me."

Bounded by fields of lush pasture land and acres of grain, the blackened 100 acre mine patch lay in ugliness below as Pilot Dowden banked his plane in wide circles. Narrow country roads bound the plat on two sides, the cornfield is the northern line, and a branch of the C. & E. I. railroad the eastern boundary.

Pickets All Over Scene.

The roads were filled with clusters of pickets and the cars and trucks which brought them to the scene were parked in a crazy pattern.

A high, thick hedge fringed one of the roads. Underneath it lay a line of pickets. The waving corn on the south could have concealed a regiment and hid whomever might have been there.

The blackened shaft house and tipple and the four tall stacks growing from the power house dominated the center of the scene. To the eastward a few hundred yards was the tiny wash house. Not a sign of life was evident about the buildings.

At the northeastern corner of the mine acreage lay the tiny village of Pimento, which normally has about 300 population. Yesterday its streets were alive with pickets standing in knots or sitting upon steps of the stores.

Pickets Lay in Shadows.

Hundreds of men sprawled upon piles of railroad ties on the "track" side and other hundreds were half hidden by trees under which they sought shelter from the burning sun. Black and unlovely in this brilliance, the "Dixie Bee" belied its happy name.

John H. Beasley, secretary of the Dixie Bee Coal corporation, and its attorney, has been bearing the brunt of worry over the present situation. When the Eureka Coal corporation, which formerly owned the mine, went into receivership last January, it was taken over by the new concern. The name is a trade name once adopted for the type of No. 5 bituminous coal mined here.

The Eureka company had been paying the union scale of wages to its miners—$6.10 per day. The present owners assert that this wage was a major factor in forcing the receivership, so when they came into control they put through what approximated a 40 per cent slice, paying $3.75 per day.

Miners Attacked Before.

Many of the 100 miners who have tried to work at the mine since its reorganization in February were formerly union men, Mr. Beasley said. Since they began work they have been almost constantly beleaguered by the pickets, he said.

A major disturbance occurred in April, when seven men were beaten, their jaws, ribs, and noses broken, and the president of the company, W. L. Mace, and O. A. Lancet, vice president and treasurer, were bruised and beaten.

to the league of nations was in response to communications from the league urging that every measure be taken to avert warfare over the Chaco jungle land. In the note Bolivia recited its version of the conflict and concluded:

"These facts place Paraguay outside the law and oblige us to defend ourselves energetically."

The note accused Paraguay of aggression.

Argentina Sends Troops.

TUCUMAN, Argentina, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Twenty battalions of the Argentine infantry and one battalion of engineers were ordered today to proceed to the Bolivian frontier to maintain Argentine neutrality in the dispute between Bolivia and Parguay over the Gran Chaco.

WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT

The dispute over the Gran Chaco region, which has again brought Bolivia and Paraguay to the point of war, has its roots in Spanish colonial days of the eighteenth century.

In those days Spain owned the whole of South America. She divided the continent for purposes of government into a number of vaguely defined viceroyalties and "audiences." As long as all were under the control of one country boundary lines mattered little, but as the various South American movements for independence succeeded they became of supreme importance.

Consequently many boundary disputes resulted between the new nations. All but the Gran Chaco trouble, however, were finally settled, the Tacna-Arica altercation between Peru and Chile having been the most recent to be agreed upon.

The Gran Chaco region itself is a great wilderness, of little value except that somewhere within it—nobody known where—lies the boundary line between Bolivia and Paraguay, which is to be defended "even at the price of war."

The Gran Chaco (great hunting ground) is a triangular area of approximately 100,000 square miles—slightly more than the combined area of Illinois and Indiana. It is wedged in between the Paraguay river to the east and the Pilcomayo river to the south. One of the angles of the triangle is formed by the junction of the two rivers. To the east lies Paraguay. To the northwest lies Bolivia. Brazil also borders it on the east and Argentina on the south, but those frontiers are well defined.

Inhabited by 50,000 Indians.

Aside from its value as the site of a potential boundary line, the Chaco's only value lies in its quebracho forests, which are a source of tanning material. Its inhabitants consist of about 50,000 Indians who probably neither know nor care to which country they owe allegiance.

Bolivia's claim to the territory is based on a map showing the division of the Spanish colonial districts and subdistricts in 1810, "in accordance with the royal ordinance of Jan. 28, 1782." This map shows the "Audiencia de Charcas," from which Bolivia was formed, extending to the junction of the Pilcomayo and Paraguay rivers.

Since Bolivia launched her war for independence in 1810 it is claimed that the boundary lines then existing should rightfully be in existence now.

Paraguay Has Similar Claim.

Paraguay's claim, oddly enough, is also rooted in Spanish colonial times. Paraguay insists that in those days all the Chaco region was governed from Asuncion, now her capital. She also adds the argument of colonization to substantiate her claims.

The first attempt to find a mutual boundary line came in 1879. A treaty was drawn up between the two countries, but it failed of ratification. The same fate befell treaties drawn in 1887 and 1894.

Since then frequent attempts have been made to arbitrate the trouble, none successful. With the Panama canal project, Bolivia for some time lost interest in the Chaco. She decided it would be better to bend all efforts toward obtaining an outlet to the Pacific. Bolivia, like Paraguay, is landlocked, but Bolivia straddles the Andes mountains in such a way that she can face either east or west.

Near War in 1928.

With access to the Pacific in mind, Bolivia interested herself in the Tacna-Arica dispute, hoping to pick up some valuable crumbs therefrom. It was settled, however, without gain to Bolivia, and once more she turned her attention to the Chaco and Paraguay.

The two nations were on the verge of war in December, 1928, and several battles were fought over possession of forts with which both countries have studded the regions to bolster their ownership. Diplomatic relations were broken from December, 1928, until May, 1930.

War was averted, however, when neutral nations intervened and the dispute was placed in the hands of a pan-American commission for mediation. Negotiations continued until this summer, when the Paraguayan representatives withdrew, charging that Bolivian troops had attacked a Paraguayan fort in the Chaco without provocation.

Nations Unequally Matched.

The nations are apparently unequally matched. Paraguay, without the Chaco area, is the smallest of South American states. Bolivia is the fourth largest and is nearly ten times as big as Paraguay. Paraguay has a population, including 10,000 Chaco Indians, of about 850,000, while Bolivia has nearly 3,000,000.

The Paraguayans, however, are known as hard fighters, as they proved in the '60s, when they stood off Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay until the population was nearly wiped out.

NATIONS WAR OVER WILDERNESS

BRAZIL RUSHES 3,500 MORE MEN AGAINST REBELS IN SAO PAULO

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Fresh battalions numbering 3,500 men were on the way to Rio de Janeiro tonight to increase the strength of federal forces fighting the rebels of Sao Paulo. The troops were coming from Parahyba, Sergipe, Para, Anozonas, and Espiritu Santo.

The federals, reported to have made important advances in the Mantequeira mountain sector, "have not succeeded completely, but a conquest is expected momentarily," the government announced.

Rebels Claim They Hold Own.

SAO PAULO, Brazil, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Rain virtually halted fighting on all fronts in the Sao Paulo revolt today. The constitutionalist rebels, denying that the federals were gaining around the Mantequeira tunnel, announced that positions there had been maintained since the outset. They said every federal attack on the tunnel had been repelled. The Paulist leaders said they believed the drive of almost a month had shown that the federal forces were unable to enter Sao Paulo.

2,000 CHINESE BESIEGE JAPS IN MANCHURIA CITY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Aug. 4 [Thursday].—Dispatches from Mukden report that intense fighting is going on at Yingkow between Japanese marines and 2,000 Chinese irregulars, who are besieging the city.

(Yingkow, also known as Newchang, is a city of 200,000 on the northeast coast of the Gulf of Liaotung, and is served by a spur of the South Manchurian railway, midway between Mukden and Port Arthur.)

Three Japanese destroyers off Yingkow are bombarding the Chinese. The 1,500 ton cruiser Kuma, flagship of the Second Japanese squadron in China waters, left Tsingtao yesterday for Yingkow. The Japanese consulate in Yingkow called Japanese residents of the neighborhood into the new city as a precaution. It is reported that 500 of the Chinese are mounted.

It became known today that Gen. Nobuyoshi Muto is scheduled to be appointed next Monday as commander of the Kwantung army, succeeding Lieut. Gen. Shigeru Honjo, who will be placed on the supreme war council.

NORWAY DENIED GREENLAND AID BY WORLD COURT

THE HAGUE, Aug. 3.—The world court this afternoon dismissed Norway's request for interim measures of protection against possible Danish encroachments in southeast Greenland.

The court, however, reserved the right to take subsequently any provisional measures which the circumstances might require. The Danish government during the hearing of the case last week promised to give the Norwegians every freedom and to conform to the convention of 1924 as long as they did not provoke incidents.

Norway promised to abstain from force and ordered its police in Greenland to show consideration to Danish nationals.

COUNTY LEGION DEMANDS BONUS, ASSAILS HOOVER

Council Votes 117-15 to Uphold Marchers.

The Cook county council of the American Legion, composed of delegates from more than 200 posts, last night adopted a resolution in which the council "unequivocally deplores and condemns" the action of the "national executive and other authorities at Washington" in calling upon the army to oust the bonus marchers from the capital.

The vote was taken after a stormy debate of an hour, during which the protests of certain delegates were silenced by parliamentary tactics. Gray haired George F. Lee of the Lakeview post, shouted that the council was "playing with dynamite." A more calm deliberation of the question was urged by R. P. O'Reilly, who introduced an amendment to temper the wording of the resolution, but the amendment was tabled.

Delegates Vote 117 to 15.

When the vote was taken on the close of the debate the resolution was adopted by a standing count of about 117 to 15.

Beside censuring the President for calling upon the army, the resolution stated the belief of the council that the adjusted service certificates should immediately be paid in full (a belief not supported by the Legion nationally); that the bonus marchers had a right to petition the government, and deplored the failure of the President to allow the bonus leaders to appear before him.

Just before the vote on the bonus marchers' resolution a delegate in the rear asked: "I just want to get this straight. If you are a Democrat you vote yes; if you are a Republican you vote no?" He was cheered.

Council Denied More Power.

Paul Armstrong, commander of the council, presided. The meeting was held at the Great Northern hotel. Immediately following the vote on the bonus marchers' resolution a discussion arose on a proposed amendment to the by-laws of the council, increasing the council's powers. During the debate it was charged that "the council is beginning to run the posts and not the posts run the council, just as the government has begun to run the people and business instead of the people and business running the government."

Mr. Lee got up to say he didn't feel the council was justified in asking for more power. This was greeted with applause. The amendment was voted down decisively. Senior Vice Commander Joseph de la Cour, an employé in the mayor's office, was elected commander for the next year and Edward F. McGinnis, senior vice commander.

Mrs. Anna C. Auchincloss Files Divorce Suit in Reno

Reno, Nev., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Anna Christian Auchincloss of New York filed suit for divorce today against Samuel Sloan Auchincloss of 440 Park avenue, New York. They were married in 1915. She charges nonsupport.

Randolph Leigh, organizer and director of the international oratorical contest, was divorced here today by Lucy Tillman Leigh, who charged cruelty. The case was uncontested. They married at Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1915, and have two children.

Robber Fleeing Holdup Hit by Auto but Escapes

One of two bandits fleeing from the bakery at 517 North avenue after a robbery last night was knocked down by a passing automobile, but managed to arise and escape. The gunmen menaced Mrs. Theresa Heilmann, owner of the bakery, and Mrs. Gretchen Drewes, 435 North avenue, a patron. They seized the latter's purse containing $10, but fled when the women screamed.

U. S. WILL PUSH INCOME QUIZ OF POLICE CAPTAINS

Authorization to complete the income tax investigation of certain Chicago police captains, said to number fourteen, but whose names were not announced was given yesterday in Washington by the internal revenue bureau, according to reports in the federal building. Neither A. P. Madden of the revenue forces nor William Froelich, assistant attorney general in charge of the district attorney's office during the illness of George E. Q. Johnson, would confirm the reports.

The investigation of the police captains has been going on for more than a year, but so far none of the evidence has been presented to the grand jury. It had previously been planned to present the evidence to the summer grand jury, but it was indicated yesterday that no action will be taken for at least a month.

Preliminary results of the investigation were forwarded to the revenue bureau in Washington. After consultation with Attorney General William D. Mitchell the local agents were instructed to go ahead and prepare evidence for prosecution. Despite repeated rumors there had been no authenticated report of the captains to be named. One report yesterday was that evidence against fourteen captains would be presented with the possibility of four being indicted.

JUDGESHIP FOR G. E. Q. JOHNSON EXPECTED SOON

The recess appointment of United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson as judge of the federal District court did not go through yesterday as had been predicted, but President Hoover is expected to make the appointment within the next day or two, Washington dispatches said last night.

Friends of the district attorney at the federal building yesterday were pleased with the news that he is to be rewarded for his services as a prosecutor.

Mr. Johnson recently underwent an operation for gallstones and is recuperating at his summer home at New Troy, Mich. He has made an excellent recovery and expects to be back in his office for the September term of court.

Aldermen Ask Payment to Lawyer for Work for City

The city council committee on local transportation yesterday recommended the payment of $7,402 to Attorney Sidney Gorham for services to the city in 1929 during the preparation of a transit ordinance. Payment of the bill had been withheld by the city pending the settlement of litigation in which the traction fund, out of which Gorham will be paid, was involved. "I'll vote for this," said Ald. Oscar Nelson [46th], "providing the bill isn't paid until the city employés receive their back salaries."

Clear Maryland Camp.

Waterbury, Md., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Forty-three men and women who started to build a permanent home for the bonus expeditionary force in the wooded hills near here today packed their belongings and departed. Some started for their homes in various parts of the country, while a few accepted offers of employment.

The evacuation was made quietly and orderly after Capt. Edward McK. Johnson of the state police and a squad of nine officers arrived at the colony to inform the campers the plan for the haven had been abandoned.

"The situation is this," Capt. Johnson told them. "The camp is over. Which way are you going? We'll help you."

Two hours after the state police arrived the camp site was deserted except for one patrolman on guard.

The colony was started last Saturday when Walter W. Waters, the veterans' commander, was deeded 25 acres by Mrs. Maude Edsell of Catonsville.

DELAY RIOTERS' TRIAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Proceedings in police court today against eight men arrested in the downtown rioting which followed attempts by the radical element of the bonus army to picket the White House ten days ago were continued until tomorrow. Charges against the men include parading without a permit, disorderly conduct and making speeches without a permit. One man, Walter Eicher of New York, also was charged with climbing a tree.

The grand jury investigation to discover the genesis of last Thursday's rioting was likewise interrupted until tomorrow by pressing routine business. In the interim municipal and federal officials gathered data which are to be presented when the inquiry is resumed. Among those subpoenaed today to appear as witnesses when the quiz is taken up tomorrow were District Commissioner Reichelderfer and Crosby and four inspectors in the police department.

Hurley Defends Troops.

Criticism that has been leveled at President Hoover for ordering troops into Washington to drive out the bonus army, which resulted in the burning of every veteran camp in the city, today brought from Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley a 1,500 word statement defending the action of the administration and the conduct of the troops in carrying out their orders.

Hurley said the troops had gone in at the request of the district commissioners, that the veterans at the time were under the control of Reds and that no deaths or serious injuries resulted from the military occupation. He denied that soldiers had fired the veterans' huts. He claimed the veterans put the torch to their own huts to save them from seizure by the soldiers.

Plans for the establishment of separate bonus camps in each of the forty-eight states were being pushed today by Walter W. Waters, nominal commander of the scattered bonus expeditionary force, after Gov. Albert C. Ritchie's refusal yesterday to permit him to bring his followers into the state of Maryland.

Bonus staff headquarters stated that Waters was "busy today working out details" of the proposed system of camps.

SHERIFF IN REYNOLDS DEATH CASE CALLED BEFORE GRAND JURY

Winston-Salem, N. C., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Sheriff J. Transou Scott, who has been investigating circumstances surrounding the fatal shooting of Z. Smith Reynolds, young millionaire, here July 6, was closeted with the Forsyth county grand jury for more than two hours today, but did not say whether he discussed the Reynolds case with the jurors.

Prior to going before the jury Sheriff Scott telephoned Stewart Warnken, vice president of Reynolds, Inc., operators of the Reynolds estate, and shortly thereafter held a conference with Solicitor Carlisle Higgins and Assistant Solicitor J. Erle McMichael.

ADMITS KILLING MICHIGAN GIRL, BURYING BODY

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

Ludington, Mich., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Francis [Rusty] Nash, 32, bachelor trapper of the village of Freesoil, late tonight confessed to the rape and murder of Evelyn Sanford, 17, the village belle, who disappeared last Saturday night.

In a three page statement, signed in the presence of Michigan state police and the Mason county prosecutor and sheriff, Nash said he waylaid the girl as she was strolling home to the Sanford farmhouse from the village, knocked her unconscious with his fist, and ravished her in a roadside swamp.

She struggled, Nash said. To subdue her he seized the belt of her gray cloth hat flung it about her neck and knotted it tightly until she was strangled.

Tells of Burying Body.

Then the trapper trussed the girls wrists behind her head, he said, flung her body across his shoulders and trudged a quarter mile to an abandoned farmhouse adjacent to the house where he made his own home alone. There, about midnight, he dug a shallow grave in a corner of the basement and buried her. Thereafter, the confession said, Nash felt remorse, and prayed.

The confessed killer is slight of stature. For a time the police suspected he must have needed an accomplice to carry his victim across the field, Evelyn having been a tall, well proportioned girl weighing 135 pounds. Nash insisted, however, that he acted alone.

Nash made his confession at a state police post north of here, police having lodged him there to preclude any chance of a lynching. The Freesoil villagers talked mob action throughout the day from the hour the body was found.

Body Found by Trooper.

A Michigan state trooper, Corporal Colburn Munger, found the body. Having spent the morning ransacking the shuttered home of Nash, in an unsuccessful search for clews, the trooper turned his attention to the nearby house vacated four months ago by an impoverished farmer.

A spade, propped up in a corner on the earthen floor, quickened his suspicions. Within a few minutes he and a volunteer helper, Harold Pfeiffer of Manistee, had uncovered the body.

Within fifteen minutes most of the six hundred men, women and children of the village were packed twenty deep around the house. Farmers hurried in from the fields, swelling the crowd.

Evelyn's father, Edward Sanford, looked once at the body and his face turned gray. He muttered inaudibly for a moment, then stumbled off towards his home to warn the family to withhold the news from his wife, who has been prostrate since the girl's disappearance was noted Sunday morning.

The villagers passed judgment on the spot. Adjudging Nash guilty, some of them were for organizing a lynching party on the scene and proceeding to Manistee to hang the prisoner at the county jail.

Post-Mortem Held.

Troopers silenced the mutterings of the crowd. They stood in silence as Coroner Stephens lifted the body into a basket and took it to his mortuary at Scottville, where, this afternoon, a post-mortem was performed. Three physicians agreed that Evelyn had been ravished and that strangulation was the cause of death.

The mob spirit rose again. The troopers let it to be known that Nash had been removed from the Manistee county jail and dropped conflicting stories as to where they had him lodged, thus confusing the crowd.

Evelyn's purse is still missing. Troopers made another search of Nash's house, a barren, bachelor establishment, furnished with a cot, cooking stove, three chairs, detective story magazines, and a set of books on engineering.

POLICE CAPTAIN WINS RACE AND SEIZES BANDIT

Capt. Michael W. Delaney of the stockyards station, who will never see sixty again, overtook a 23 year old bandit in a foot race last night and knocked the robber out in a battle for the policeman's pistol.

The bandit, William O'Malley, 1424 West 51st street, and a companion, James Wallace, 26 years old, 7239 Stony Island avenue, pretending to have pistols in their pockets, held up J. H. Dietz in his grocery at 6360 South Peoria street and took $21. As the two fled into the street Capt. Delaney was being driven home by his chauffeur, Policeman William Higgins.

Delaney and Higgins leaped from their automobile and gave chase. Wallace surrendered without a struggle to Higgins. O'Malley ran on until he was overtaken and turned to seize the captain's gun. Capt. Delaney struck him to the pavement with one blow to the jaw.

Dr. William A. O'Brien Jr., 41 years old, of 4043 Melrose street, a radiologist, was being held by Albany Park police last night for questioning in connection with the death of his wife, Vera, 26, who was killed Monday by poison supposedly self-administered.

In ordering the doctor held, Capt. Joseph Goldberg explained that he was investigating the possibility that Mrs. O'Brien ended her life in a suicide pact with her husband but which he failed to carry through.

When Mrs. O'Brien's body was found a farewell note was discovered on her dresser. It read: "I think, Bill, you can do a little better without me. That is why I am doing this. I still love you."

Sends for Letters.

Last night Capt. Goldberg began an investigation to make certain that the note was in Mrs. O'Brien's handwriting. He sent for several other letters which Mrs. O'Brien recently wrote to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stafford, in Midville, Ind.

Also, on request of police and other officials, the vital organs of Mrs. O'Brien will be examined to determine what poison killed her. An empty vial, which had contained anaphol, was found in the O'Brien home. To allow the chemical tests the inquest was continued from yesterday to Aug. 10.

Dr. O'Brien, who is a licensed physician, was held yesterday when he appeared at the station with his attorney, Oliver J. Chambers, for questioning following the funeral of Mrs. O'Brien. Others who appeared were Mr. and Mrs. Stafford, the parents; Mrs. Wanda Conklin, sister of the dead woman, and Ward Stafford, 1416 Carmen avenue, her brother. All were questioned particularly about the details of the week-end visit of Mrs. O'Brien's parents to her home.

Denies Previous Marriage.

At the outset Dr. O'Brien was asked if he had been previously married. He answered negatively. Capt. Goldberg then accused him of having a wife and three children at Leaksville, N. C. Dr. O'Brien then admitted the previous marriage. He said he got a divorce from his first wife on Feb. 18, 1931, before Judge Daniel P. Trude and married Vera Stafford March 1, that year.

Events of the week-end were related by Ward Stafford and the parents and by Mrs. Conklin and her husband, Duncan, who live in the same apartment building with Dr. O'Brien. Following the Sunday dinner, they said, Dr. O'Brien left in a huff about 4 o'clock, taking his car. At 9:30 the Conklins noticed that his car was in front, but the O'Brien apartment was dark. No one answered their rings on the bell, they said. Dr. O'Brien said he was home at the time.

At 9 o'clock the following morning, they said, he telephoned them that "something terrible" had occurred. When they arrived he informed them Vera was dead. Ward Stafford inquired if he had notified police and when he replied such procedure was unnecessary Stafford summoned police.

"We don't need police," Dr. O'Brien was quoted as saying. "I can sign a death certificate myself."

Physician Explains Delay.

Dr. O'Brien explained to Capt. Goldberg that he did not summon authorities because he did not deem it immediately necessary, that he felt his wife's family was entitled to first knowledge. He insisted his wife ended her life, although he admitted she had given him no inkling that she contemplated such an act.

Capt. Goldberg said Mrs. Conklin told him that on May 19 Dr. O'Brien beat her sister. One of her letters to her parents relates one of their alleged fights, police were told.

DRINKING DECREASES SO FAST IN FINLAND DISTILLERY IS SHUT

This statement was made by the monopoly company's manager today. The fact is particularly noteworthy because almost daily new attractive brands of home and foreign products are added to the shops' stock lists. The manager holds that the financial depression is chiefly responsible for the decline, which, however, also seems to testify that the nation is constitutionally more temperate than in prohibition days.

Brewers complain that beer sales have fallen about 40 per cent as compared with 1931, although stronger beer has been introduced. Schnaps consumption has decreased so much that the largest state owned distillery closed for a fortnight and private distillers have been obliged to make drastic cuts in output in order to avoid overproduction.

Notebook Data Implicate Federal Agents.

Stanley Gad, a former undercover man for the prohibition department, who, it is charged, made a living by informing on his friends, was held by the "Scotland Yard" police detail yesterday on a charge of impersonating a federal officer. Two federal agencies have joined in the investigation of their former employé.

Gad, who says he is only 20 years old, but who looks quite mature, was arrested Monday night by Police Sergeant Michael Naughton. With Gad was John Lelko, operator of a beer flat at 3130 West 41st street. The police said that Gad confessed "shaking Lelko down" for money on a threat of having his flat raided by federal agents.

Notes Show Money Splits.

In Gad's pockets were found papers and a notebook containing the names of five prohibition agents with whom, he said, he had "worked." Also found in the notebook were a series of notations indicating a division of money. Police would not divulge the names of the agents.

Also in Gad's notebook was a notation of a shipment of five cans of alcohol, one to 1908 West 25th street for $19 and four to the Harris hotel for $80. Other notations bore testimony to the collection of money from saloonkeepers.

Deputy Administrator Arthur E. Hamilton said Gad had been employed as an informer. "Gad was not a prohibition agent," Hamilton said, "he was used merely to make buys on which subsequent raids were based. He was paid according to the cases he made. He has not been employed for some time."

According to Naughton, Gad said he was paid $5 by the government for every purchase of liquor he made. Practically all his buys, he said, were made in the saloons of former friends who did not suspect he was a snooper for the drys. Police said Gad also admitted forcing Lelko to buy him an automobile for $160 "because he feared his friends would recognize his old car which had been parked around the prohibition offices."

Collects for "Protection."

All told, Gad said, he made about 30 buys while working for the drys, among them being one on Lelko's beer flat. Later he returned to Lelko and promised protection. Lelko paid $75 in two payments to a supposed prohibition agent in return for protection.

It could not be learned whether or not the names of the five agents, listed by Gad as working with him, had been given to the government. Two of the agents were designated by Sergt. Naughton as "Larry" and "Stanley." Stanley was the agent paid by Lelko. Gad probably will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Walker today.

Drama League Sponsor

A pageant, "Memories," was presented at Navy pier auditorium yesterday by the high school group of the Children's Civic theater of Chicago. The production, one of a series during the 1932 season, was given under the auspices of the Chicago Drama league in coöperation with the city of Chicago. Among the guests of honor were Mrs. Clarence Hough, president of the league, and Miss Irene Jean Crandall, author of the play. Mrs. Lewis Carlton Jesseph of the Chicago Drama league is chairman of the staff of the Children's Civic theater.

STEGE ASSUMES DUTIES; CRIME IS UP TO CAPTAINS

Capt. John Stege, newly appointed under the police reorganization plan as supervisor of the west side zone, took office yesterday with the announcement that district captains will be held responsible for all crimes in their territory.

"If a serious crime is committed in any district, I expect the captain of that district to give it his personal attention, whether the crime is committed at midnight or high noon," Capt. Stege said. "If my assistance is needed, I will give it gladly."

Capt. Stege has his office at the Marquette police station, headquarters of the west side zone, which includes Maxwell, Marquette, Lawndale, Fillmore, Des Plaines, Warren avenue, and Austin police districts. A secretary and several investigators will make up the supervisor's personal staff.

Capt. Stege said that he is preparing a map of the zone, on which he will record all crimes in an effort to determine where police should be concentrated to prevent crime.

FALSE! SEABURY REBUTTAL SAYS TO WALKER PLEA

Rakes Mayor's Defense of Statute Limitation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Saying Mayor Walker's plea that ten of the 15 removal charges against him are "outlawed" is a defense that no person "is obliged to make if he is willing to meet issues on their merits," Samuel Seabury completed today his rebuttal of Mr. Walker's recent defense, and forwarded it to Gov. Roosevelt.

SAMUEL SEABURY.

"It is a sorry sight indeed to see a person occupying high public office, whose honor is impugned, taking the position that the people must suffer him to continue in public office because he was fortunate enough not to be caught in time," said Mr. Seabury with reference to the mayor's argument that the ten charges in question related to acts during the mayor's first term in office.

Time Not Exhausted.

This "statute of limitations" plea was the more unjustifiable because it was legally unsound, the governor having power to remove the mayor for acts during his previous term, the rebuttal continued.

Taking up the allegations against the mayor, Mr. Seabury, accused Walker directly of "evasion and falsification" in the recent reply to the charges. The rebuttal by Seabury is one of the most scathing documents he has written since he became counsel to the Hofstadter legislative committee.

Evidence taken before the committee was cited in detail to establish that the mayor accepted various sums from brokerage houses and individuals; that he fostered the Equitable bus franchise; that he carried on hidden financial transactions through the now missing Russell T. Sherwood; that he permitted his brother, Dr. William H. Walker, to split fees in city cases; that he failed to produce his financial records or to testify frankly before the legislative committee.

"Evasion and Contradiction."

An entire section of the response was designed to show that the mayor had repeatedly contradicted documentary evidence and witnesses in an effort to avoid damaging admissions. The section concluded with the statement:

"On this record of equivocation, evasion, and contradiction the mayor has demonstrated himself to be unworthy of belief where his official conduct is called in question. If this be so, then his so-called explanations must be rejected, and the inferences which reasonably and logically follow from the facts which have been adduced lead inevitably to the conclusion of official misconduct in disregard of the rights of the people he is sworn to protect."

"In Plain Words, False."

Touching upon Mr. Walker's explanation that the alleged "gratuity" of about $250,000 which he received from Paul Block, publisher, was the result of a legitimate joint stock transaction, the rebuttal declared:

"The mayor's answer to this specification is, in plain language, false. Its falsity accentuates and aggravates the impropriety involved in the whole transaction."

Mr. Block had testified that, in response to interest shown by Block's 10 year old son in the mayor's "inadequate" salary (then $25,000), he had opened a brokerage account and had given to Mr. Walker a share of the profits. Subsequently the publisher denied that he, in return, had hoped to receive any favors from the mayor.

Taking up the reputed receipt of various sums from persons other than Mr. Block, Mr. Seabury began with the item of $26,000 received by the mayor from J. A. Sisto & Co., a brokerage firm interested in taxicab securities. The mayor had asserted in his answer that the money represented profit on a deal in the stock of the Cosden Oil company. Mr. Seabury, in his original specifications, charged that the payment was a return for activity by the mayor in behalf of taxicab legislation in which Sisto & Co. were interested.

The only witnesses besides the mayor, who testified concerning this "ordinary, lawful business transaction," refused to do so until assured of immunity from prosecution, Mr. Seabury pointed out. He recalled the testimony of J. A. Sisto that the profit on Cosden oil stock was not the mayor's, but that the $26,000 represented a gift to Mr. Walker.

City Charter Violated.

The mayor violated the city charter by holding bonds of the Reliance Bronze and Steel corporation, which received a city contract for traffic light standards, Mr. Seabury insisted, attacking the mayor's three-fold defense that the ownership of stock, rather than bonds, was specified by the charter; that the mayor had not known of the contract, and that the bonds, in any event, had been given to Mrs. Walker before the time of the contract.

Mr. Seabury contended that the bonds were convertible, making them equivalent to stock; that the mayor's knowledge of the contract was essential only to a criminal proceeding, not to removal charges, and that transference of the bonds to Mrs. Walker made no difference in the mayor's position.

City Not Benefitted.

Mr. Seabury's principal allegations on this score had been that the mayor, to the detriment of the city, had fostered the Equitable franchise for the benefit of a group including his friend, State Senator John A. Hastings of Brooklyn, and that the mayor himself had received a $10,000 letter of credit, augmented by a $3,000 overdraft, from J. Allan Smith, one of the bus company promoters. The mayor, in answer, had declared he voted for the Equitable franchise because he believed it to be in the best interests of the city, and that neither he nor Mrs. Walker had benefited by the letter of credit.

To controvert the mayor's contention that the Equitable franchise was in the best interest of the city, Mr. Seabury's rebuttal included a table purporting to show that the Service Bus company in an application for a franchise had offered the city greater financial advantages and better service.

Mr. Seabury pointed out that facts concerning the letter of credit have never been explained and asked the governor not to believe that the letter of credit would have been purchased by J. Allan Smith if it had had no connection with the Equitable matter.

The rebuttal ended with the attack on the mayor's veracity during his testimony before the Hofstadter committee and with the assertion that his failure to produce complete records of his finances in response to subpoena duces tecum indicated that Mr. Walker did not have the records because he found it convenient not to preserve them.

No Hint of Roosevelt Reaction.

Just how Gov. Roosevelt will make use of the rebuttal was not indicated in the dispatches from Albany. Indications were that he would study it before deciding whether any plan he might have in mind needs to be altered in view of the points raised by Mr. Seabury.

NEW YORK BANKER MISSING TWO WEEKS; POLICE HUNT VAIN

New York, Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Russell H. Lucas, banker and war veteran, has been missing since July 14, it became known today, and a search by the police so far has failed to find him.

Mr. Lucas, former controller of the Fidelity Investment association, and long associated with the Bankers' Trust company, disappeared after leaving the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lauren Arnold at Saugatuck, Conn., for New York.

This spring he had collapsed and resigned from his position with the Fidelity Investment association to spend several weeks in the sanitarium of Dr. Edward Russell at New Haven. From there he went to spend a few weeks with the Arnolds.

His disappearance was reported to the missing persons bureau at police headquarters by his brother, Capt. C. M. Lucas of Fort Sill, Okla. The case was marked "confidential" until today.

GIRL ENDS HER LIFE IN FOUR STORY LEAP AT NEW YORK HOTEL

New York, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Miss Ethel Kauf, 20, a pretty, red haired girl from Cleveland, O., committed suicide today when she jumped from a room on the fourth floor of the Murray Hill hotel.

Her body was found in the rear courtyard. In a note she had directed that her purse, containing a watch but no money, be turned over to a sister "at the Y. M. C. A."

"I am sorry I am going to cause a disturbance and scandal," she wrote. "I hope and pray this four story drop kills me, but if it doesn't please do not notify my sister. You had better let the city bury me, as I don't believe my family has any money left. Thank you."

B. C. CLARK, WET, MISSOURI, LEADS FOR U. S. SENATE

H. W. Kiel Out Ahead for G. O. P. Nomination.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Col. Bennett C. Clark, battling wet and son of the late Speaker Champ Clark, leaped so far into the lead for the Democratic nomination for United States senator today that it was conceded his victory will far exceed the 40,000 figure forecast by his managers.

His lead over Charles M. Howell, former Democratic state chairman who had the backing of the T. J. Pendergast organization in Kansas City, jumped to 40,820 on the returns from 2,923 out of 4,195 precincts in the state, with strong Clark territory still to be heard from.

The vote set a record for primaries in Missouri. With a little more than three-quarters of the precincts heard from the vote was near the 750,000 mark.

Clark Takes Early Stand.

The vote from the 2,923 precincts stood 176,481 for Clark and 135,661 for Howell. Howell affirmed the prohibition plank adopted by the national convention but Clark was out ahead of him on this issue long before the convention met.

A third candidate, Charles M. Hay, the party nominee for this office in 1928 and a veteran dry although he recently declared for resubmission, had polled 83,697 votes.

In the Republican race for the senatorial nomination, Henry W. Kiel had a plurality which showed signs of going into a majority over a field of five opponents, including Blodgett Priest, St. Louis attorney, and Dewey Short, former congressman from Galena. Kiel, like Clark, is a pronounced wet and was thrice mayor of St. Louis.

Wilson Leads for Governor.

In the governorship fight the early indications were that the Democratic nomination would go to Francis M. Wilson, who had the backing of the Pendergast organization, but the Republican race was said to be a close contest between Secretary of State Charles U. Becker and Lieut. Gov. E. H. Winter. Wilson apparently gave a decided beating to Russell L. Dearmont, who raised the battle cry of "bossism" against him.

Returns from 2,508 precincts gave Becker 89,743 votes, Winter 77,837, and Leo E. Koehler, 69,070.

While the result of the congressional races—all of which are on the state at large basis because of the lack of redistricting—were in doubt to some extent, the early indications were that the four Republican incumbents had won out and that most of the twelve sitting Democrats would come through.

Kansas Drys Winners.

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Although the prohibition issue was overshadowed, if not engulfed, by questions of taxation and governmental economy, Kansas, on the face of returns from yesterday's primary, has not shifted its position on the liquor problem.

Returns today showed the renomination of Senator George McGill and Gov. Harry H. Woodring by the Democrats, and indicated the nomination of Ben S. Paulen for United States senator and of Alfred M. Landon for the governorship. Senator McGill, Paulen, and Landon are listed as drys.

McGill was opposed by Chauncey B. Little, former congressman, who favors repeal, but McGill was leading him nearly two to one. Joseph H. Brady, who opposed Landon in the Republican governorship battle on a "vote as you drink" platform, seemingly received about one-fifth of the vote given Landon.

Returns from 2,131 precincts gave Paulen 90,091 and Joe H. Mercer 56,505.

AUTO SPEED TRAP OPERATOR LOSES JOB AND 'CYCLE

The village board of Wooddale has abolished the office of chief of police following disclosures that its one man police force had been operating a speed trap. This was announced yesterday by members of the board who said that Chief of Police J. L. Carroll, against whom the charges were made, will become a deputy marshal without pay after Aug. 13. The board acted after 85 of the village's 135 citizens had signed a petition complaining against Carroll's methods of enforcing traffic laws. Wooddale is 22 miles west of Chicago on Irving Park boulevard.

One motorist arrested by Chief Carroll was James P. Haynes, executive vice president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. He refused to plead guilty to speeding before a neighboring magistrate and announced he would fight the charge. The Chicago Motor club, through its attorney, Joseph H. Braun, obtained his acquittal.

The Wooddale board explained that Carroll would not be permitted to ride a motorcycle on his new job.

BEER TRANSPORTERS HELD.

Fred Wagner and Herbert Gartner, arrested Tuesday transporting beer barrels hidden in larger sausage barrels, waived examination yesterday and were held to the grand jury in bonds of $3,000 and $2,000, respectively, by United States Commissioner Walker.

Aviatrix Takes Stand to Tell of Dead Lover's Suicide Threat

Miami, Fla., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Haden Clarke, slain writer, talked much of suicide in general and threatened his own life several times, Mrs. Jessie Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix and flying partner of Capt. William Lancaster, who is being tried for the murder of Clarke, testified today.

MRS. J. M. KEITH-MILLER.

Clarke often was drunk, she said, and when Clarke's mother would upbraid him he would become despondent.

Mrs. Keith-Miller admitted she had tried to defend Lancaster since the death of Clarke, that she had done everything to help him, and admitted she visited him in jail every time she could get in.

Reasons why Clarke might have committed suicide she gave as remorse, jealousy of her, financial depression, and doubts about his physical condition. She said he began worrying over money shortly after falling in love with her. Clarke cut off intimate relations with her two weeks before his death because of physical disability, she testified.

Has Difficult Day.

Mrs. Keith-Miller was on the stand as a witness for both the state and the defense. She appeared on the breaking point as State's Attorney N. V. Hawthorne questioned her before a crowded courtroom, mostly women.

"In trying to clear Capt. Lancaster of this charge did you not say you would issue a statement to newspapers that you had killed Haden Clarke, if Lancaster were held?" Hawthorne asked.

"It sounds radical, but I did," she answered.

She was convinced of Lancaster's innocence, she said, and felt that she should do something for the loyalty he had shown her. Lancaster, fearing his love for her was futile, had offered to crash his plane so he could will Clarke and herself a $1,000 insurance policy, she told the jury, but the insurance company failed.

"Do you know who killed Haden Clarke?" Hawthorne asked.

"I feel that Haden killed himself," she replied.

Tells of Love Triangle.

With eyes tear filled she told the jury the story of the love triangle which led up to the tragedy. She expected to marry Capt. Lancaster when he was free to marry her. Then she fell in love with Clarke. She told how she advised Lancaster in St. Louis by mail of her plan to marry Clarke, how Lancaster rushed to Miami by plane and arrived sad and disappointed.

That night at dinner, she said, Lancaster made the remark that he thought he had left her with a gentleman. Haden rose angrily from the table and threw his chair against the wall. But a further clash was averted. It was in this atmosphere of tenseness that they retired for the night. Clarke refused to let her talk with Lancaster with the outburst: "I don't want him to talk you out of marrying me."

A few hours later Lancaster rapped on her door and told her Clarke had killed himself.

Story of Privation.

Mrs. Keith Miller told a story of privation and want during the days she, Clarke, and Lancaster lived together. She told how after their lights and gas were shut off they cooked in the back yard. Lancaster and Clarke foraged in the neighborhood and returned with chickens and rabbits which they ate.

When Lancaster left on a business venture which failed she said she and Clarke made and drank quantities of home brew together. One night he told her he loved her. From that point their love affair developed swiftly to its tragic climax.

BOSTON OPERA'S EX-MANAGER IS HURT IN CRASH

New York, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Max Rabinoff, former manager of the Boston Opera company, was severely injured yesterday in an automobile accident at Spark Hill, N. Y.

Rabinoff said he drove his automobile off the road to avoid hitting two women in another auto. The car turned over and Rabinoff was pinned underneath. Many motorists passed before two policemen finally rescued him and took him to a hospital.

Rabinoff is widely known as a musical figure and international economist. He once represented Esthonia, Georgia, Ukrainia, and other small governments in Paris, and has cooperated with the United States government on Russian affairs.

Lately he has been interested in the Cosmopolitan Opera association.

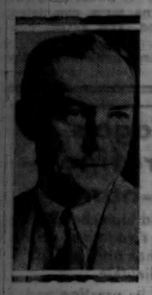
BANKS WILL LEND CITY $10,000,000 AND THAT'S ALL

Officials Must Plan How to Distribute Sum.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Four of Chicago's largest banks announced yesterday that they would purchase ten or twelve million dollars' worth of tax anticipation warrants, and no more. That is the limit they put on warrant purchases from all the local governments, including the city, county, schools, library, parks, and sanitary district.



MELVIN A. TRAYLOR.

"There are now in the possession of the four banks," said Melvin A. Traylor of the First National, "more than $40,000,000 of tax warrants. The limit we have set is 50 million dollars, then we are through. We are primarily bankers, and cannot in justice to our trust pay all of our eggs in one basket."

Seeks Market in East.

While no recent survey has been made, it was roughly estimated that the unpaid pay rolls of the local governments at the end of 1932 would total about $62,000,000. If City Controller Szymczak is unable to find a market for tax warrants in the east, yesterday's announcement indicated that Chicago public employés may not be paid for a considerable part of this year—perhaps from four to six months, depending upon the particular government involved.

The four banks, Continental Illinois, First National, Northern Trust, and Harris Trust, have agreed to purchase $2,000,000 of 1931 educational fund warrants at par, when they could have purchased them in the open market at a saving of $320,000 to $400,000.

"This indicates our faith and interest in the local governments," said Mr. Traylor. "The only way we can redeem those warrants at par is to hold them for the payment of taxes.

"It is up to public officials to decide how they want to distribute the funds we will be able to make available. We have notified them; they know the limit. They should know their business."

Pay Day Is Threatened.

The pay day for teachers and other school employés, tentatively set for tomorrow, was seriously threatened yesterday. Under an arrangement made by Deputy Controller V. S. Petterson the banks were to purchase $2,000,000 of 1931 educational fund tax warrants from the school board. Chapman & Cutler security experts are said to have declared yesterday they will not approve those warrants if the school board asks a rehearing in the "N. S. F. check" law decision before the state Supreme court.

In that opinion the court limited the use of "N. S. F. checks" to the payment of 1932 taxes. The Chapman and Cutler experts said that if the court reviews the case it may decide that these N. S. F. checks can be used to pay 1931 taxes and thereby impair payment of the 1931 warrants which are to be sold to the banks.

Tries to Withdraw Petition.

School Attorney Thomas V. Sullivan filed his petition for a rehearing yesterday. Then after getting the views of Chapman & Cutler he attempted to get authority to withdraw it. The few school trustees who appeared at the committee meetings approved of the withdrawal, but the petition was ordered filed by formal board action. Technically it should be rescinded by a board resolution, although President Lewis E. Myers might assume the authority to order the petition withdrawn.

The board is scheduled to meet tomorrow. The deal for the $2,000,000 with the banks will not go through until the petition is withdrawn and the cash pay day may be delayed accordingly.

The distribution of $5,428,340 in tax warrants to teachers and other school employés for back salaries of 1931 also ran into difficulties. This will start this morning with the distribution of about $1,650,000 of warrants on hand at the board rooms. Teachers and employés will obtain their "mutilated checks" at the secretary's office on the third floor of the Builders' building and exchange them for tax warrants on the fourth floor of the old bank building at Wells and Randolph streets. The warrants will be paid out while they last.

Under the arrangement with the city the board is to obtain $3,400,000 of 1931 tax warrants from the city in exchange for 1932 warrants. Those $3,400,000 warrants are in denominations of $100,000 each. The board wants them split into $50 and $100 warrants so they may be given to employés. However, the warrants must be signed by the mayor and city controller, and no arrangement has been made to get those signatures.

Both Are Away.

Mayor Cermak is in Europe and Controller Szymczak is in New York. So the payment by warrants, after those on hand have been distributed, may have to be postponed. One teachers' organization is reported to have cabled Mayor Cermak and Controller Szymczak for a proxy to sign the new small warrants.

Heretofore action by the city council has been deemed necessary for the mayor and controller to designate a person to sign warrants and bonds in their stead. The city council meets this afternoon and then adjourns for the summer.

SANITARY DISTRICT AND LINCOLN PARK EMPLOYES ARE PAID

Yesterday was pay day for employés of the sanitary district and the Lincoln park board. Nearly 1,000 district employés received checks for the last half of April and the first half of May. The pay roll of the park board was for the last half of June.

The sanitary district pay roll amounted to $250,000. Before the checks were distributed Chapman & Cutler, experts in municipal securities, approved the action of the district trustees in passing an ordinance changing the interest rate on 1931 tax warrants from 4 to 6 per cent. The increase was necessary in order to sell the warrants to the banks.

Pay checks for 986 employés of Lincoln park amounted to $61,000. The cash was obtained mainly through the sale of 1931 tax anticipation warrants although golf course fees aided to a small extent. Approximately 400 employés of the Lincoln park system are "staggered," or working only part time.

MAN WOUNDED FLEEING RAID BY DRY AGENTS

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—With an official investigation promised by W. Frank Cunningham, federal prohibition enforcement director, Assistant District Attorney John P. McEvoy today declared Kenosha county would take no further steps in the investigation of the shooting of William Brown, 35, wounded while trying to flee from dry agents during a raid on a still in Salem township last night.

Brown is at the Kenosha hospital with a bullet in his hip. He told McEvoy that three men who he thought were holdup men opened fire on him as he fled from the barnyard on the farm operated by Carl Paass.

Cunningham made a statement in Milwaukee declaring the shooting was accidental and that D. B. McKenzie, Milwaukee dry agent, slipped in a ditch and his gun was accidentally discharged. McKenzie admitted to McEvoy that he had fired several shots at the fleeing men, McEvoy said.

McKenzie, together with Joel Lindquist and Al Herdich, attached to the Milwaukee federal prohibition department, came to the farmhouse late yesterday and found Paass tending a double column alcohol still. While questioning Paass three men drove up in a car. When the agents went out to investigate the three men started to run across the field.

Brown was about to jump over a fence when he dropped with a bullet in his hip. Al Blaski, Racine, and Richard Lamielle, 37, Kenosha, the other two men, stopped running and helped Brown back to the farmhouse. Paass, Blaski, and Lamielle were taken to the county jail while Brown was taken to the hospital.

McEvoy entered the investigation a short time later and obtained statements from the prisoners as well as the agents. These statements will be turned over to the United States district attorney in Milwaukee or to the investigator sent to Kenosha by Cunningham, McEvoy said.

"L" Billboard Ordinance Referred to Committee

The council committee on local transportation yesterday referred to a subcommittee the proposed ordinance which would permit the "L" lines to erect billboards and electric signs on the exterior of elevated structures over public streets and alleys. The ordinance, submitted by the "L" lines themselves, would provide that the city receive 3 per cent of the gross receipts of such billboard rentals.

Final Tests Given

Children of the summer drawing class at the Art institute yesterday were given one of the final tests in their course, the sketching of a costumed model. Miss Grace Earl posed before the youthful artists in colonial garb.

The class, which will complete its work this week, has been under the direction of Miss Margaret Artingstall. It meets five mornings a week in the six weeks' program. The pupils have shown marked ability in life drawing and some have demonstrated a good professional touch, according to Miss Margarita Steffenson, assistant dean of the school. The drawings of the children have been placed on exhibit in a gallery on the main floor.

3 PICKPOCKETS ARRAIGNED; GET CONTINUANCES

Three well known pickpockets were given continuances to Aug. 17 when they were arraigned yesterday on disorderly conduct charges before Municipal Judge Thomas Green. They were arrested Tuesday on a street car and a writ of habeas corpus for their release was presented to Chief Justice Harry Fisher of the Criminal court one hour and eleven minutes later, although they had no chance to communicate with a lawyer or friends.

Abe Schippman, 54 years old, one of the men, was identified in court by Samuel Hyldahl, 2733 North Sacramento avenue, as the man who picked his pocket of $9 recently. Schippman was charged with larceny, but was released later on $2,500 bail.

Robert R. Marcus, the professional bondsman who furnished Schippman's bail, was the petitioner for the writ of habeas corpus for the three pickpockets, it was learned. He has an office in room 201, 1109 South State street, next to the detective bureau. Whenever one of his "clients" is arrested he is immediately informed, it was learned, and the petition for a writ of habeas corpus is filed forthwith.

MAYOR CERMAK BOOSTS THE 1933 FAIR IN GERMANY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BREMERHAVEN, Germany, Aug. 3.—The Atlantic air was kind to Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago. He disembarked from the liner Bremen today smiling and by his own admission much improved in health. The mayor and his party at once boarded a train for Leipzig to stop overnight before proceeding to Carlsbad, the Czechoslovakian resort.

While the trip primarily concerns his health, Mayor Cermak outlined a number of projects which he intends to undertake while in Europe. He said he hopes to convince the cities he visits that Chicago's Century of Progress fair in 1933 will be held regardless of the depression, because, he said, the money to guarantee it already is in hand.

Will Talk to Schmeling.

He will endeavor to meet Max Schmeling, dethroned world heavyweight boxing champion, and invite him to fight Mickey Walker in a bout at Soldiers' field. He also hopes to renew an acquaintance with President Paul von Hindenburg in Germany. In Czechoslovakia he will visit President Thomas G. Masaryk and Foreign Minister Eduard Benes, and in Berlin he will call upon Mayor Heinrich Sahm.

Bremen was ready to welcome the mayor, but he was intent upon getting to Leipzig and left soon after his arrival. Leipzig's great trade fair is closed, but the mayor may talk to some of its managers to pick up some advice that may help in organizing the Chicago exposition.

Swims in Bremen's Pool.

With the mayor are his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Frank J. Jirka; his granddaughter, Miss Vivian Graham; Capt. Phil Parodi, Matthias Bauler, and County Commissioner Charles H. Weber. After the stop in Leipzig they will go to Carlsbad. Dr. Jirka confirmed the statement that the mayor's health is improving, and has been since the second day of the trip on the Bremen. Toward the end of the crossing the mayor took a couple of swims in the pool, he said.

After the stay at Carlsbad Mayor Cermak will go to the capital, Prague, and to his birthplace, Kladno, near there. After visiting President Masaryk and Benes he will begin his return journey, reaching Berlin about the middle of August. While in Europe the mayor hopes to add several more nations to the twenty already listed for participation in the fair.

THREE BANKS PAY $25,537 PERSONAL TAXES FOR 1930

Attorney Werner W. Schroeder appeared before Circuit Judge Craig Hood yesterday and paid $25,537 in 1930 personal property taxes, penalties, and court costs for three banks. The banks were the Cosmopolitan State bank, the Austin State bank, and the Western State bank of Cicero. Respectively they paid $13,019, $6,259, and $6,259. The Cosmopolitan Bond and Mortgage company also paid a judgment of $874, bringing the total to $26,411.

The cases were among the first 10,000 personal property tax suits through which the special county attorney, Lee LaRochelle, expects to collect several millions of dollars in delinquent taxes. When the defendants appeared Tuesday they were granted continuances until today.

Judge Hood has been hearing approximately 50 personalty suits daily. Most of the defendants ask and are granted continuances.

Sack of Mail Stolen by Boys Is Found Unopened

A sack of mail stolen from a truck in Blue Island Tuesday night was recovered yesterday unopened in Tinley Park. The sack was found on a mail box by a rural free delivery driver and turned over to the postal inspectors. Two youths who were seen stealing the sack were not apprehended.

ROOSEVELT TOLD BY SZYMCZAK OF CHICAGO'S NEEDS

Interested in Financial Plight of City.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The plight of Chicago's unpaid school teachers and other city employés was told to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt today by M. S. Szymczak, Chicago city controller and member of the board acting for the mayor during Mayor Cermak's absence in Europe.

M. S. SZYMCZAK.

Mr. Szymczak, who has been in New York city seeking a large loan from eastern bankers, so that Chicago's public employés may be paid, spent several hours today conferring with Gov. Roosevelt and with members of the state finance department.

"I was much interested in the controller's discussion of affairs in Chicago," Gov. Roosevelt said after the interview. "It is most unfortunate that the conditions he described should exist. However, he tells me that the situation is looking up."

Returns to New York.

The Chicagoan discussed the financial affairs of New York state with Morris Tremaine, state controller, and then returned to New York to continue his conferences with the bankers there.

Gov. Roosevelt discussed the politics of Michigan with a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, Patrick H. O'Brien of Detroit. Mr O'Brien, who was first in the field, but who is generally conceded to be facing defeat in the Sept. 13 primary by William A. Comstock, the regular party candidate, has been visiting relatives in Port Henry, N. Y., and stopped in to pay his respects to the governor.

Raskob Due Today.

John J. Raskob telephoned Gov. Roosevelt today that he may come for his visit with the governor tomorrow instead of Friday as he had planned. Mr. Raskob will discuss the problems of financing the coming campaign with Gov. Roosevelt.

The governor spent an hour or more discussing foreign affairs with Sumner Wells of Maryland, a former attaché of the state department at Washington, and J. Enos Ray, chairman of the Maryland state committee, who accompanied Mr. Wells.

SCIENTISTS BATTLE OVER HOW LONG ROMAN NOSE HAS BEEN ROMAN

LONDON, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Sir Arthur Keith and Prof. Elliot Smith, famous British scientists, argued at the international pre-history conference here today about how long the Roman nose had been Roman and who lived in Palestine 6,000 years ago.

While Prof. Smith jumped up and challenged his opinions at almost every point, Sir Arthur described the pre-historic dwellers of Palestine as a peculiar people whom he called "Natufians."

"They showed definite Negroid characteristics of flat nose and thick lips," Sir Arthur said. "I would call it a Roman nose. The nose now characteristic of the Semitic peoples is quite a recent thing—one of the most recent things in evolution."

Sir Arthur said the Natufians had big heads, knocked out two of the front teeth of their women folk, and also practiced cannibalism. Prof. Smith challenged the Negroid characteristics and the Roman nose, and said he also was sceptical about the cannibalism.

DOCTORS ASSAIL RELIEF AGENCIES' MEDICAL SYSTEM

Legislators' Criticism Is Answered by Ryerson.

While Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, was considering the recommendations of a legislative subcommittee on the handling of charity yesterday, it became known that he had been asked to investigate the costs of medical service furnished to the poor.

E. L. RYERSON JR.

Four physicians, who are on the civil service eligible list but who have not been hired by the county, charged the Cook county bureau of public welfare with unfairness in the management of the medical department. The recommendations of the subcommittee, a division of the Illinois commission on taxation and expenditures, which were made public on Tuesday, are to be discussed by the relief commission at its meeting tomorrow, Mr. Ryerson said.

Comment by Ryerson.

These recommendations, calling for reduced and standardized salaries, speedier relief in cases of distress, more thorough investigations before relief is given, and the employment of not more than one member of a family in relief work, were called "proper and fair but impracticable" by Mr. Ryerson in his informal comment.

"It should be remembered," Mr. Ryerson said, "that the commission did not create the salaries of the workers nor select them. They were employed by the individual charity agencies already in existence and the commission's funds are distributed through these agencies.

"I believe that salaries should be standardized, but I doubt that they could be reduced without reducing efficiency. The subcommittee suggests more thorough investigations of relief seekers and at the same time speedier relief in distress cases. These things cannot be done by untrained workers and for that reason I don't think a reduction in salaries is advisable. The salaries of the workers have already been cut once."

On the question of giving consideration to the payment of "reasonable rents," recommended by the subcommittee, Mr. Ryerson said the commission would be glad to do this, but, funds not permitting, they must think of buying food.

Physicians Make Charges.

The physicians making the charges against the Cook county welfare bureau are Drs. J. M. Radzinski, A. M. Weinbaum, H. M. Kamin, and L. A. Maslow. They asked that more physicians be employed in the charity service and charged that those now working have averaged more than $400 a month in collections from the relief commission.

Joseph L. Moss, director of the public welfare bureau, reported to Mr. Ryerson that the 39 physicians now furnishing medical service for the relief commision averaged only $222 a month during June and recommended against increasing the number of physicians at present.

"All 39 physicians are residents of Chicago and suburbs and certified to the bureau of public welfare by the Cook county civil service commission," said Mr. Moss.

Paid by Relief Commission.

The bureau of welfare physicians were paid by the county up to last February and have been paid by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission since then. Each physician collects $1.50 for each call made.

An examination of the pay rolls showed that the physicians collected much higher sums monthly from the county than from the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. The following table gives the names and addresses of the physicians on the staff, the sum collected for their medical services since last January, the last month when they were paid by the county, and for June, the last month when they were paid by the relief commission.

NEW YORK SEEKS 75 MILLION LOAN FOR NEW TUNNEL

Wagner on Delegation Before U. S. Board.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The port of New York authority today sounded out the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance corporation on the prospects of getting a $75,000,000 loan to build another vehicular toll tunnel under the Hudson river.

The New York delegation, which was accompanied by Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], co-author of the relief bill that added $2,122,000,000 to the corporation's funds, came from the interview so thoroughly pleased by the favorable prospects that a formal application will be presented as quickly as it can be drawn.

Senator Wagner declared there is no doubt that the loan will be approved.

Provides Uptown Outlet.

The tunnel is to burrow the river bed from Weehawken to 38th street, giving New York its first direct uptown inlet and outlet. Attempts to obtain permission to build a bridge across the river in that vicinity have been turned down by the war department on the ground it would interfere with the city's big ship harbor. The tunnel, said port officials, taking it for granted that the loan was cinched, will be identical to the downtown Holland tunnel for vehicles.

The port authority wants the money at the rate of $20,000,000 a year. The New York delegation argued that the Hudson tunnel project was one of the self-liquidating projects for the construction of which the major portion of the relief bill was drafted. The port authority showed a surplus of $6,000,000 to prove that its present projects are self-liquidating.

Ohio Gets Loan.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation today granted a loan of $852,662 to the state of Ohio for the relief of destitution in certain counties of the state. It was the second relief loan made by the corporation from the 300 million dollar fund provided for that purpose in the 2 billion dollar emergency relief bill passed at the last session of congress.

GUY (WHATAMAN) HUDSON MOANS WOES TO DENVER

Denver, Colo., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Guy Edward [Whataman] Hudson tramped the downtown streets here today looking for a job and discussing with all who cared to listen a half million dollar slander suit he plans to file against his wife, Mrs. Minnie [Ma] Kennedy Hudson. The suit, he said, will be filed in Las Vegas, Nev., and will be based upon accusations she has made against him for several months.

Life to Whataman has become "just hell, plain hell" because of his well aired troubles with Mrs. Hudson.

"I am a quiet man," he said, "anxious to mind my own business. Any man who wants to achieve the ultimate in misery should duplicate my experience."

Hudson regrets that Mrs. Hudson, mother of Aime Semple McPherson-Hutton, did not coöperate with him in getting a quiet divorce.

"Now I'm going to fight back," he said, "Meantime I need a job to make money to pay for my part in the contest."

FIRE DAMAGES BUILDING.

Fire of unknown origin yesterday destroyed the interior of a two story frame building at 7220 Cottage Grove avenue, doing damage estimated at $2,000. The building was used as a dwelling, but the occupants have been away for two weeks. Firemen believe leaking gas caused the fire.

BIGGEST BUREAU RUNS 20 BILLION WORTH OF ROADS

They Say They Are Being Regulated to Death.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Oldest and most powerful of the multitude of independent boards of the federal government is the interstate commerce commission which regulates in the minutest details of management and operation the railroads of the country comprising a property valued at more than 20 billions of dollars.

The railroads whose managements were plundering the consumer and investor prior to 1887 when an outraged public sentiment brought about the creation of the commission of regulation are now being plundered by the bureaucracy, if we are to believe the outcries of the railroad owners. They contend that the roads are being regulated to death.

In addition to carrying out the mandate of congress that freight and passenger rates be just and reasonable, the commission investigates and reports on railroad accidents, installation of safety devices, such as automatic train control, cab curtains and other contrivances, great and small. It may initiate rates, modify or suspend adjustments proposed by the carriers, and is obliged to hear a case involving rates on bung stoppers as well as to undertake general investigations such as the 15 per cent rate advance proposal of 1931.

To General Superintendent.

It administers the standard time act, supervises the transportation of explosives, which involves road and other tests of dangerous articles, and prescribes generally and in detail the accounts and statistics to be kept by the carriers. Issuance of securities and new construction must be approved by the commission before being undertaken by the roads. Abandonments also must be approved before being put into effect.

In emergency the commission may approve service orders regarding the movement and interchange of locomotives and cars, may inaugurate embargoes and may permit the railroads to route freight and passengers as the exigencies of the situation may require. It investigates and requires reports on hours of service of employés and the condition of motive power of railroads. It has been engaged in valuing the physical properties of the railroads since 1913 and the finish of this job is not yet in sight.

Under the provisions of the transportation act of 1920 the commission has prescribed a scheme of consolidation of the roads. It has certain responsibilities under the railway act of 1926. It investigates recommendations of awards of medals of honor to railway employés who have performed conspicuous acts of heroism in saving lives.

Congress Cuts Budget.

The commission now has nearly 2,300 civil service employés. Last year it expended $9,412,473. The President asked $8,761,410 for the commission for 1933, but congress cut the amount to $7,148,560.

To guard their interests before the commission the railroads and shippers employ 4,351 lawyers registered to practice before the body. The commission passes in a single year on more than 20,000 different matters. Its formal opinions comprise 11,729 pages and its hearings 30 million words.

It has been estimated that about four millions of the commission's budget are annually expended or regulatory activities that could be dispensed with without impairing the degree of protection afforded the public. Three-fourths of such possible savings would be effected by discontinuing the work of valuation of the roads.

The valuation undertaking has been described as a 180 million dollar monument of futility erected to the memory of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette. The legislation was one of the senator's principal achievements. Its purpose was to arrive at the real value of the railroads, the rates of which were to be such as to yield a reasonable return thereon instead of on the capital stock which might be watered.

Money That Was Wasted.

Twenty years have passed and the work is only partly done. The Supreme court has only recently held that the commission was leaving out factors that properly should be included, wherefore the commission has been compelled to amend its procedure. In the 20 years the government has expended more than 40 millions on the work and the roads have been compelled to expend more than 140 millions.

It now looks as if congress will repeal the provision of the transportation act for the recapture by the government of railroad earnings in excess og 6 per cent return, and in that event, according to Alfred P. Thom, general counsel of the Association of Railway Executives, there will be removed one of the reasons for continuing the valuation work.

"The valuation act," Mr. Thom told the house interstate commerce committee, "was enacted in the first instance by those who suspected that the railroads were full of watered securities. The examination which the commission has made since 1913 to this time had exploded this theory. The office of valuation now is simply to support a claim for recapture or to support a rule of rate making as it exists now on the statute. If you repeal recapture and you make a different rule of rate making not based upon valuation the importance of valuation has disappeared."

One of the greatest activities of the commission is sending questionnaires to railroads. It is not uncommon for a single railroad to be compelled to expend $500,000 in a single year to answer the questionnaires of the commission.

N. Y. GARMENT UNION VOTES STRIKE; 15,000 TO 20,000 WILL QUIT

New York, Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Fifteen to twenty thousand men are to go on strike in the clothing industry tomorrow, bringing work to an end in 75 per cent of the shops in the Metropolitan area, according to a resolution adopted by the local union workers.

The strike is designed "to remedy the deplorable sweat shop conditions that have come into existence since the depression" and "to end the cutting of wages and to establish union control of working conditions," the resolution states.

The shop chairmen and members of the executive board of the local unions of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America adopted the resolution at a meeting last night.

Another principal reason for the strike, it was said, is to force shops which had made individual agreements with the workers to observe them, abandoning the practice of sending work to nonunion shops and to out of town shops beyond the supervision of the union, in which substandard working conditions exist.

STATE MUST RULE ECONOMICS, KEY TO CHILE'S POLICY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 3.—Piqued by the slighting and sometimes sarcastic references to its socialistic policy, the Carlos G. Davila government today issued an official definition of the type of socialism to which it intends to adhere. The explanation took the form of a circular in the English language which was broadcast among foreign traders and business firms. It declares:

"Our policy is to establish state socialism. State socialism is in no way connected with communism or bolshevism, nor even with scientific socialism. In brief, it is the recognition that economic liberalism is impotent to dominate the crisis and that the state must undertake the organization and regulation of economics in all its sections with a view to avoiding a general collapse.

"Chaotic and disorderly economics, without a plan, the development of which is only determined by private interests and therefore exposed to violent fluctuations, must be replaced by well ordered and rational economics directed on the basis of a plan which, far from eliminating individual economy, subjects it to control that consults above all the interest and welfare of the community. In this form 'state socialism,' the motto of the Chilean revolution on the one hand, and 'planned capitalism' or 'planned economics' on the other, a thesis which prominent American and European economists defend, are absolutely identical concepts."

RECEIVERS FOR 'L' LINES AWARDED $2,000 A MONTH

Commissioner of Public Works Albert A. Sprague and Britton I. Budd, receivers for the Chicago Rapid Transit company, were each authorized to draw $2,000 a month on account, pending final settlement of the receivership, in an order issued yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. The order was made retroactive to July and will be in effect until November. The law firm of Isham, Lincoln & Beale, attorneys for the receivers, was awarded the same monthly compensation of $2,000. The order also empowered the receivers to send 50 employés of the elevated lines to military camps without loss of pay.

Science has discovered that a flower grown in Japan repels and kills winged insects. Now the extract of these flowers is employed to completely free your home—and keep it free—from these germ-bearing pests.

That flower extract is the basis of Fly-Tox, developed in Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Ten years and over $100,00 have been spent by us in perfecting it.

The result is a perfumed mist, called Fly-Tox. Used as we direct, it creates in a room a pleasant cloud of vapor. An all-pervading mist, harmless to people, stainless to walls or furnishings. But that mist kills every insect that it touches. And they can't escape.

Think what that means to your home. Complete and constant protection from these germ-bearing pests. These insects, by their feet or stings, carry the germs of over 30 diseases. They carry these germs to your food or to blood streams. Many thousands of people—especially children—die from these infections every year. Fly-Tox offers you an easy, certain, economical way to complete protection.

FLY-TOX ONLY

A Rex Research Product

Use Fly-Tox only, and always in the new-type Fly-Tox sprayer. Use it because of its marvelous efficiency. Every lot is tested on flies in our laboratory. Use it because its extra strength means great economy to you. You cannot take chances in protection of your home. Fly-Tox also kills Roaches, Ants, Bed Bugs, and Moths. Get Fly-Tox at once. Sold everywhere. Harmless to people. Stainless. Made by the Makers of Moth-Tox.

COUNCIL ASKED TO RECONSIDER TAXICAB REPEAL

Hearing Given Supporters of Hidden Ordinance.

A move to reconsider repeal of the "hidden" taxicab regulation ordinance, which gave the public vehicle license commission autocratic powers in refusing to license independent cabs, got under way yesterday in the council local transportation committee. The council repealed the ordinance at its last meeting by a 40 to 6 vote, after a number of aldermen charged that the measure had been "slipped over" in 1929 without knowledge of a majority of the aldermen.

When the question of reconsideration was brought up, Attorney Lee Daniels, representing a group of independent drivers, gave the committee what he asserted was a true picture of the treatment accorded those drivers when they appeared before the vehicle license commission, of which Deputy Police Commissioner John H. Alcock is chairman and Lieut. James Killackey, headed of the vehicle bureau, secretary.

"Enough Cabs Now——"

"When we appeared," Attorney Daniels said, "Deputy Commissioner Alcock told us we couldn't get licenses, that there was no use wasting our time, and didn't even listen to us. He said, 'There are enough cabs now, and that's all.'

"Alcock opened that meeting by saying that if there were any lawyers present who had advised their clients that they could help them get a license they were taking money under false pretenses. 'The commission isn't going to issue any licenses,' he said. 'It will give you a hearing and that's all.'"

The meeting referred to occurred about two months ago, Deputy Commissioner Alcock said later.

"What I told the drivers," he asserted, "was that we could not, under the ordinance, issue them any licenses. I asked them not to blame the police department for refusing them an opportunity to work, but to seek redress from the city council."

1,000 More Cabs.

The ordinance to which he referred, the one repealed last week, empowered the vehicle commission to issue licenses to almost 1,000 more cabs than are now on the streets.

William Quinlan, president of the street car workers' union, appeared before the committee yesterday as a champion of taxicab restriction.

"I think the committee should give careful consideration before allowing a lot of taxicabs to come in," he said. "It would hurt our business, block progress of street cars, and a jitney taxicab service would grow up."

"Is it your opinion that we should reconsider the repealer and give it committee consideration?" said Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], quickly.

"That's my thought," replied Mr. Quinlan.

Unfair Restriction.

"I'm not for flooding the streets with cabs," said Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th], who introduced the repealer, "but the ordinance which was repealed inequitably restricted the issuance of licenses, so that no one could obtain a license.

"No harm was done by the repeal. The public vehicle license commission is still active, with broad discretionary powers under what is retained in the old ordinance. Let the repealer stand so we can force the large cab companies to come in here while we work out a decent ordinance. If we repeal the repealer the companies will stall."

"Are you going to reconsider the repealer tomorrow," demanded Ald. Joseph P. Rostenkowski [33rd] of Ald. Bowler.

"I don't know," he replied. "Some action may be taken.

"I'll second Ald. Nelson's motion to let the repealer stand," said Ald. Rostenkowski.

Working on Communication.

Corporation Counsel Sexton made known yesterday that he was working on a communication on taxicabs, to be presented to the council today. He refused to divulge its contents, but it was reported that he would remind the council that in Mayor Cermak's absence, and due to the lack of a veto power over council, the aldermen should give careful consideration to its actions, and perhaps rescind the repealer and give it committee consideration.

Legal Obstacles Balk Plan for Oak Street Bathhouse

Legal and financial obstacles were raised yesterday by officials of the Lincoln park system in their consideration of the proposed erection of bath houses on the Oak street beach. The conveniences have been demanded by persons in the 42d and 43d wards, from which many of the bathers come.

W. H. Beckman, attorney for the park board, pointed out that the question of riparian rights might prove insurmountable. "By the riparian settlement," asserted Attorney Beckman, "it was agreed that no structures should be erected along Oak street beach and Lake Shore drive at any time. The same covenant was in the settlement of 1915. Only statuary and shrubbery can be placed along the beach."

Use of Portables Suggested.

Some of the proponents of the beach conveniences have suggested that portables be erected, but in the opinion of Attorney Beckman the use of such a structure for 90 days, the length of the bathing season, would be considered permanent.

A conference of engineers and park officials was held yesterday afternoon. At the end H. Otto Weege, superintendent of the Lincoln park system, announced that no feasible plan had been produced.

No Funds Available.

"I have three engineers trying to devise a scheme whereby the conveniences could be installed," said Mr. Weege, "but so far the cost has been prohibitive. We haven't any funds available or appropriated for such a purpose. It would take a great deal of money to erect the bathhouses, and this would mean another load on the taxpayer."

The south park board, similarly placed financially, recently in conjunction with World's Fair officials allowed such bath house construction to be made by a private company, but cries against the resultant small charges for bath house facilities forced an abandonment of the project.

President Warren Wright of the park board has called a meeting of the commissioners for next Tuesday afternoon, at which time the proponents of the plan will be given a hearing. Mr. Weege said that if the commissioners decided to spend the money on Tuesday it would take two weeks before plans were completed, material purchased, and actual construction begun.

The bathing season ends on the day after Labor day.

CAMERAS CLICK AS MRS. POLLAK PRAYS IN JAIL

Inquest Into Slaying to Be Resumed Today.

Dorothy Pollak, pretty husband slayer, knelt in prayer in the county jail yesterday while photographers took her picture. She is to appear at an inquest this afternoon into the death of Joseph Pollak, her middle aged mate whom she shot and killed a week ago in their home at 1936 Garfield boulevard.

Veteran jail officials looked on somewhat cynically, recalling the Lucille McLeod murder case of twenty-five years ago. Lucille, who killed her sweetheart, habitually posed in an attitude of prayer for photographers. She was acquitted.

The inquest, which was continued following the slaying in order to allow the police and state's attorney time for investigation, will be resumed at 1:30 o'clock today in the county morgue. Defense Attorney W. W. O'Brien will present no evidence and Assistant State's Attorneys Frank Mast and Harry Gabel expect a quick indictment.

Find Her Victim's Money.

Dorothy, or "Vicky," as she was known among her friends, will be a rich young woman if she escapes the penalty for killing her husband, according to disclosures yesterday. Pollak's alcohol business on the south side netted him big profits, an examination of his bank book revealed. He banked more than $41,800 in a checking account at the Stock Yards National bank in the thirty days preceding his death. Many of the deposits ranged as high as $2,000.

A hunt was made for other bank accounts and safety deposit vaults said to have been rented by Pollak. Estimates of his fortune were as high as $500,000. He was one of the "business man bootleggers" whose name never appeared in the press, who avoided entangling alliances with the underworld, and who prospered while more notorious liquor dealers got the publicity but not the profits.

Hunt Pollak's Associates.

Investigators from the coroner's office were seeking two men who were associates of Pollak in the alcohol business. One of these men acted as a secretary to Pollak and was also said to have handled large amounts of money for Pollak. The other man was said to be a miner southwest side politician. The names of these men were withheld.

The bank records showed that Pollak was in the habit of withdrawing his money as fast as he deposited it. The police believe that Mrs. Pollak's mother, Mrs. Victoria Mysza, has been told by the widow where one of his safety deposit boxes is. They noticed at the funeral for Pollak last Monday that Mrs. Pollak whispered to her mother and that later Mrs. Mysza, who is not well-to-do, flourished a $500 bill in paying off a portion of the funeral expenses.

Quiz Saloonkeeper Friend.

Steve Kurek, 1615 West 43d street, was apparently the last one to see Pollak alive other than his wife. Kurek was questioned yesterday by Prosecutors Mast and Gabel. At 11 o'clock on July 27 he met Pollak at the latter's "real estate office" at 46th street and Ashland avenue, Kurek, who is a saloonkeeper, said.

"We went to the bank at 41st and Ashland," said Kurek. "Joe took out a big roll of bills, there must have been $4,000 in the roll, and deposited it."

The report that Mrs. Pollak was the girl friend of John [Dingbat] Oberta, gangster slain on an automobile ride two years ago, was ignored by the young widow.

"I don't recall the name," she said when asked if she knew the "Dingbat."

Family Quarrel Revealed.

Additional evidence that Pollak was extremely jealous of his good looking wife was uncovered yesterday. Friends of the two said that at a Labor day dance last year in the Sokol dance hall at 23d and Whipple streets Pollak punched his wife repeatedly when she danced with other men.

Prosecutors Mast and Gabel were told that Mrs. Pollak had practiced with her .25 caliber pistol for weeks before the shooting at a target range in the basement of the Pollak home, 1936 West Garfield boulevard. They examined the basement but could find no bullet holes to substantiate the story.

"She must have practiced somewhere," said Mast. "She plugged her husband in the right eye from a distance of 15 feet. That's too accurate shooting to be called accidental."

State to Ask Death.

The prosecutors said they would ask the death penalty for Mrs. Pollak when she is tried for murder. A trial within a month is probable, because both state and defense are anxious for an early hearing, it was announced.

Investigators discovered that Mrs. Pollak had been married once before, when only 16 years old, to a barber whose name was not learned. She was divorced after a short period. Pollak was also married before to a woman described as a beautiful blonde.

FIGHTS DIVORCE

Mrs. Laura B. Price, 20 East Delaware place, who last year served six months in the county jail for conspiracy to defraud an insurance company by a fake robbery of her jewels, filed suit for separate maintenance yesterday in the Superior court against Edwin C. Price, woodenware manufacturer.

Mrs. Price charged desertion, stating that her husband left her in June, 1931. At that time she was in the county jail. Her bill also charges him with cruelty. It states that Price is worth $750,000 and has an income of $50,000 a year.

Price filed suit for divorce two days ago in Florida, it was disclosed. Mrs. Price asked an injunction to restrain him from carrying on that suit. The injunction petition will be heard today by Superior Judge William J. Lindsay.

Mrs. Price reported to police that she was robbed of jewelry valued at $18,000 in October, 1929, but shortly thereafter confessed that the robbery was a frameup to collect insurance. Maurice A. Barnett, loop jeweler, who was represented as the ringleader of the plot, was sentenced to serve one to five years in the penitentiary. Mrs. Price and Max Krakow, a jewelery salesman, served six months' sentences. Joseph Baum and Ben Levin, the fake robbers, testified for the prosecution against their confederates and charges against them were dropped.

ITALY MOBILIZES ENTIRE FLEET FOR BIG WAR GAMES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Aug. 3.—Italy's entire Mediterranean fleet will start mobilizing tomorrow night between Sicily and the coast of Tripoli for naval maneuvers, which will be carried out on the most imposing scale since the war.

More than 100 surface ships, including all the big 10,000 ton modern cruisers of the Italian navy, 30 submarines, and 23 naval aviation squadrons, will take part in the games, which are to be directed by Admiral Ducci, chief of staff of the Italian navy.

The theme of the hostilities will be an attack on a convoy of supply ships supposed to be proceeding from Tripoli to the mainland of Italy. Half of the fleet, guarding this convoy, will be attacked by the other half, using Taranto, Sicily, and other Mediterranean islands as bases. These maneuvers indicate that Italy regards her north African colonies as possible sources of supply in any future conflict.

Coast Guard Captains to Mark Birthday of Service

IL DUCE EXALTS WAR AS "NOBLE"; FLAYS PACIFISM

Declares Perpetual Peace Is an Impossibility.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Aug. 3.—Perpetual peace is not possible and nations develop their highest virtues as warriors, Premier Mussolini will declare in an article which will appear over his signature tomorrow morning in Popolo d'Italia, a newspaper which he founded in Milan 17 years ago.

The article is entitled "Political and Social Doctrine." In it Il Duce declares that socialism has been dead since the war and that his own creation, Fascism, is now clearly shaped both as a régime and as a doctrine.

Seen as Appeal to Germany.

From the tenor of the article the impression is given that Mussolini is shouting across the Alps for a German audience. He argues that you cannot be really up to date in this 20th century unless you shape your political institutions along Fascist lines.

Disagreeing with the American thinker William James that war may have an ethical equivalent, Il Duce writes:

"With regard to the future development of humanity and aside from expédiency and political considerations, Fascism does not believe either in the possibility or usefulness of perpetual peace and rejects pacifism as cowardice and renunciation of struggle. Only war carries human energy to the highest tension and prints the seal of nobility on the peoples which have the virtues to confront it. All other proofs of quality are substitutes which never make a man actually confront himself over the alternatives of life and death. Doctrine, therefore, which is prejudiced in favor of peace is foreign to Fascism."

Takes Crack at League.

In view of the irritation here over the outcome and methods of the Geneva and Lausanne disarmament and reparations conferences the following passage from Il Duce's article is also interesting:

"Also strange to the spirit of Fascism, even if it accepts them for reasons of utility in determined political situations, are all those international structures and societies of nations."

"Fascism also inculcates an antipacifist spirit in the minds of individuals," Il Duce continues. "The motto of the first Fascists, 'Me ne frego' [meaning I don't give a damn for anything], is the act of the philosophy, a doctrine, an education for combat and acceptance of the risk that this implies. It is significant of the new style of Italian living."

Calls Democracy Tyrannical.

Fascism also denies the materialistic concept of economic felicity, Il Duce continues. It denies the equation of welfare to happiness, which would reduce man to be an animal for pasturing and shepherding—in other words, make a sort of vegetable out of him, he says.

After assailing democracy and denying that Fascism wants to set up its own god or destroy all gods, as does bolshevism, Mussolini concludes with a diapason on imperialism.

"The Fascist state is a will to power and an empire," he says. "The Roman tradition is the idea of force. In the Fascist doctrine the imperial idea is not only a territorial, military, and mercantile expression but also one of spirit and moral expansion. For Fascism the tendency to the imperial idea means expansion of the nation and is a manifestation of vitality."

Regarding democracy, Mussolini says it is "a régime without a king, but with many kings, sometimes more exclusive, tyrannical, and ruinous than a single king who is a tyrant."

HITLERITES CALL FOR MORE ARMY RULE IN GERMANY

Point to Death List; Ask for Power.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—Pointing to the continuing political bloodshed in Germany, Adolf Hitler's National Socialist organ, Angriff, today demanded that the government reëstablish martial law, dissolve the communist party, and arm the Fascists' "storm troops" as part of the police force. The paper also demanded that executive power be placed in the hands of Hitlerites.

Four more deaths were charged to political violence today, and others were injured in scattered outbreaks.

The government, however, took no further action. A spokesman declared that the Hitlerite demands would not frighten the government into relinquishing any of its power, made more secure, it is believed, as a result of the indecisive reichstag election.

Reichsbanner Asks Action.

Pressure for action came from another quarter today when the leader of the republican reichsbanner organization called on Baron Wilhelm von Gayl, minister of interior, and presented him with a list of outrages which he claimed were committed by Hitlerites against republicans in the last week. Von Gayl promised immediate action.

Despite denials issued both by Hitlerite officials and Gen. Kurst von Schleicher, minister of defense, and despite today's Nazi demands on the government, reports persist that negotiations are, or soon will be, under way to clear the way to give Hitler a place in the government.

These negotiations will come to a head, it is believed, when Chancellor Franz von Papen returns in a week or ten days from a brief vacation.

Trouble Among Nazis.

Meanwhile, trouble loomed in the ranks of the Hitlerite storm troops. The more obstreperous units, it is held, are responsible for many of the acts of violence since the election Sunday. Responsible storm troop leaders, aware that these terroristic acts are damaging the party, have called a meeting in Berlin to consider steps to take.

Reds and Nazis exchanged bullets in Moabit district of Berlin last night. One Nazi was killed. Hitlerites were blamed for the killing of the mayor of Morgau, a village in East Prussia.

At Augsburg a communist was fired upon in his home. He escaped, but his wife was killed. At Zweibruecken, Hitlerites killed a worker, the father of 10 children, when they fired into a crowd from an automobile.

LADIES OF NOBLE BIRTH REGAIN TOP RUNG IN GERMANY

All but 2 "Cabinet Fraus" Hail from Nobility.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 3—Once more, as in former imperial days, Germany's "first ladies of the land" hail from the nobility. There are only two exceptions. The two nonaristocratic members of the feudal Von Papen cabinet are also married to commoners.

Frau Martha von Papen, the chancellor's wife, ranks the ladies of the blueblooded cabinet. She is née Von Boch-Galhau. Her father, René von Boch-Galhau, was, in the days of the kaiser, one of Germany's most prominent industrialists.

Hails from Saar District.

The Boch family hails from the Saar district. The chancellor's efforts to reach an economic understanding with France are said to be largely due to Frau von Papen's influence. She is also related to the Pescatore family, prominent industrialists in Luxemburg.

With the advent of the Von Papen cabinet the reich chancellory once more has a hostess. Dr. Heinrich Bruening, chancellor for more than two years, was a bachelor. Despite her youthful looks Frau von Papen is already grandmother. Her oldest daughter, Marie Antoinette, married Herr von Stockhausen, governor of the large and important industrial district of Lüdinghausen in Westphalia.

Baroness Marie von Neurath, wife of the foreign minister, Konstantin von Neurath, is half-American by birth. Her mother was one of the three sisters Kaupe of New York, famed for their beauty. All three sisters married into the German aristocracy.

Twice a Schleicher.

Frau Elisabeth von Schleicher, wife of the "master mind" of the cabinet, Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, is the daughter of Baron von Hennigs, a cavalry general. She married twice into the Schleicher family. Her first husband was Capt. Bogislaw von Schleicher, a cousin of the present war minister, whom she married a year ago.

Countess von Schwerin-Krosigk, wife of the finance minister, Count Ludwig von Schwerin-Krosigk, is the daughter of Count Plettenberg-Heeren. Count Schwerin was originally a Herr von Krosigk until he was adopted by his mother's brother, a Count Schwerin who owns estates in Pomerania.

Daughter of '71 Veteran.

Baroness von Eltz-Ruebenach, wife of the postmaster general, Baron von Eltz-Ruebenach, is the daughter of Gen. von Hutier, one of Germany's outstanding military leaders in the war. The general is a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870-'71. Gen. von Hutier is president of the pro-monarchist National club.

Frau Guertner, wife of Minister of Justice Franz Guertner, is the daughter of Lieut. Col. Stoffel. Guertner is of modest birth compared with the other members of the cabinet. He is the son of an engine driver.

Gunmen Bind 4 Victims, Rob Store Owner of $800

Ernest Hahn, owner of a hardware store at 3535 Armitage avenue, his two sons, and a customer, were tied with twine in the rear of the store by three gunmen who robbed Hahn of $800 last night.

REOPEN BRITISH PARLEYS, SENATE URGES DE VALERA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Aug. 3.—A motion introduced by Senator J. C. Counihan, farmers' leader, urging the government to reopen negotiations on the land annuities dispute with England, was passed by the senate today. The government is not bound by the resolution.

Senator Joseph Connolly, minister of posts and telegraph, speaking for the government, declared that President de Valera already had gone as far as possible, "short of absolute crawling to the British government."

"I welcome the economic fight," Connolly said. "If it does not come now, it must come later and I am willing to fight it out. There will be suffering both here and in Britain. I sympathize with the British at what they will have to face, which is complete collapse."

The senator warned Prime Minister MacDonald that he is wrong if he thinks America will remit the war debts Britain owes. "America will not even consider remission until the dispute with the Free State is settled," he declared.

Seize $7,000 Narcotics in Raid; Two Are Arrested

Federal narcotic agents yesterday raided a flat at 755 Cornelia avenue, arrested a man and a woman and confiscated drugs valued at approximately $7,000. According to Ralph Oyler, chief agent in charge, more than 300 women had visited the place during the two weeks it was being watched. At the time of the raid three women, all of whom were smoking opium, were in the flat. They were not held. Joyce Norton, 27 years old, was held in bonds of $3,000 and the hearing continued to Aug. 10 by United States Commissioner Walker. Harry Greenwald, said to be a former Moran gangster, was held in bonds of $2,000 and his hearing set for Aug. 10.

SMOOT WANTS PLEA FOR SILVER AT WORLD PARLEY

Asks Western Man as One Monetary Expert.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Appointment of a westerner as one of the economic experts who will work with the league of nations arranging for the forthcoming international monetary and economic conference was urged upon President Hoover today by Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], who said he was convinced the conference would aid in stabilizing silver.

REED SMOOT.

"I told the President that I believed an expert on silver should be selected as one of the two American experts," Senator Smoot said. "I am certain that there will come out of this conference something to stabilize silver. It would be of more assistance to world recovery than any other step that could be taken at this time."

In making public the text of the American acceptance of the league invitation to attend the economic parley, state department officials today said that no conversations had been held with European powers regarding the location or time when the conference would be held. Reports that the conference would be held in the United States were discounted. The text of the statement disclosed that the United States acceptance was based on the understanding that reparations and war debts were not to be discussed.

EIGHT NATIONS INVOLVED.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 3.—With American acceptance of the invitation to participate in a world economic conference, eight governments will take part in the work of organizing immediately the preliminary details for the parley.

Each government, including the American, will nominate one representative to an organizing committee. The other powers represented will be Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium and Norway. The United States will also appoint two delegates—financial and economic—to a preparatory committee which will work out the details of the agenda.

The general expectation here is that the preparatory committee will meet in London toward the end of September and will then consider the time and place of the conference. London is the favorite selection for a meeting place, but there is some doubt as to whether the opening date should precede or follow the American presidential elections.

Tornado Hits Brazil; Many Killed, Twenty Ships Sink

[Copyright, 1932, By the New York Times.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 3.—A tornado last night struck Sao Christovao, a suburg of Rio de Janeiro, killing and injuring many persons and destroying property valued at many thousands of dollars. A large stone, believed to have been a meteorite, struck a salt warehouse, unroofing it and smashing a wall. Maritime police report the sinking of a score of small ships and damage to many others.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF GOVERNMENT.

The bureau of agricultural economics estimates that 1,472,000 people last year moved from the farms to the cities and 1,679,000 moved from the cities to farms. Thus there was a net migration to the land of more than 200,000 individuals.

These figures are conceded to be nothing more than estimates based upon extensive samplings in all sections of the country. The results are certainly inaccurate, but there is no reason to believe they are grossly so.

This migration of 200,000 people was accomplished without formal organization and without assistance from governments, and, of course, without coercion from any government. At this time, when every one who has a magazine or a soap box at his disposal is demanding that the nation be rescued from its difficulties by government action, the fact that on balance 200,000 American citizens have faced their problems themselves and solved them by their own action, with their own means, is disturbing. Can this mean that the American people retain some of the initiative for which they used to be renowned the world over? Can it mean that the American people, if left alone to adjust themselves to changed conditions, could solve their problems without the advice, the alms, or the coercion of the central government?

Suppose the situation were slightly changed. Suppose that the government had had charge of this mass migration. Would the individuals placed on the land have been as well selected for farm work as they have been by self-determination? How large an army of bureaucrats would have been required to arrange the movement and supervise it? How heavy a charge on the taxpayers would have been entailed? Could congress have refrained from voting a subsidy to each new farmer?

By and large, men and women know what is best for themselves. By and large, men and women, left to themselves, will solve their difficulties more promptly and more effectively than the best government which ever existed could do so.

NOT REDUCING THIS ARMAMENT.

One of the most flagrant exhibitions of bureaucratic expansion was described by Arthur Sears Henning in yesterday's TRIBUNE. The weary taxpayer will learn from that article that the government has just completed a $2,500,000 academy building for the instruction of coast guard cadets. In 1917 before the era of Volstead the coast guard consisted of 224 commissioned officers, 404 warrant officers, 3,478 enlisted men. The cadets were 20. The guard's duties were then iceberg patrol work, protection from smuggling of drugs and alien labor, rescue work and a few lesser missions. In 1931 there were 418 commissioned officers, 875 warrant officers, 10,615 enlisted men. Cadets numbered 86 and since have been increased to 122. With the new academy it is expected they will be increased to around 200. The late unlamented session of congress appropriated a little short of $400,000 to run the school for the fiscal year.

What is impressive in this report is its exemplification of the workings of bureaucracy. There is no thought of slowing down, although there is every evidence of a change in the prohibition régime which will reduce the operations of the rum chasers and restore the guard's responsibilities to something like their former scope. A private enterprise would take such possibilities into some account. But bureaucracy has but one command, full steam ahead. Thus while we are reducing the army and the navy, the new marble pile at New London opens its doors and new cadets are gathered in and educated for a service in all probability declining, to the tune of $2,250 per cadet per year of instruction. And this instruction has now been increased from 2 to 4 years, the qualifications and the training being much the same as that of an Annapolis cadet.

Reduction of armament does not seem to be a policy applying to armament to be used against Americans suspected of disrespect of the dry régime, only to armament to be used in defense from a foreign foe.

MR. MELLON SHOULD WEAR 'EM FOR MR. HOOVER.

Although Mr. Mellon kept the legs of the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton in the long trousers of his native land when he went to court as American ambassador, he was discovered later at tea parties in the Fauntleroys which court precisians think better become the subordinate state. Mr. Mellon evidently decided to give both the long and the short a play, with consideration for the probably inconsiderate comment of his fellow countrymen on the one hand and a nice regard for British feeling on the other. There is a gusto of independence in the long which can be modified gracefully by an occasional appearance in the shorts. Thus a balance is maintained and the ambassador is neither too much his own man nor too much the king's.

It might be well if Mr. Mellon when again on his native shore for a visit were to display the shorts here, for instance, when he calls on Mr. Hoover or even Mr. Stimson. Mr. Stimson would be gratified by such regard for the dignity of his office and even Mr. Hoover might not be untouched by it, a sort of compensating tribute to the democracy.

THE N. S. F. LAW.

The Chicago school employés find that if their predicament could be muddled more than it has been, a seeming impossibility now found to exist, it was by the N. S. F. bill passed by the legislature requiring the board of education to issue checks on demand, stamped to indicate that there were no funds to cash them. This device, apparently dragged out of the legislature without any consideration being given its probable consequences, is now held to cloud the tax anticipation warrants which otherwise might be sold.

Responsibility for this freak bit of legislation is dimly placed, but it was one of a score of bills hustled to Springfield without any limitation other than the imagination of their sponsors, but it, unlike many of the others, went through. A legislature in session is about as dangerous a thing as American life discloses. The possibilities are there and, although most of the bills introduced in a session are properly suppressed, now and again a bad one escapes. The American belief in relief by legislation is hardy and survives much experience and discouragement. It probably ought to be unconstitutional for a legislature to make a fool of itself or to be made a fool of, but, as the Tennessee monkey law demonstrated to the public, it isn't.

THE CUBS CHANGE A MANAGER.

A sailor's lot is not the only luckless one. Managing a ball team in a city which wants a pennant is another. Whoever manages the Chicago Cubs can sympathize with a football coach unable to find a fast back field for a college which would trade any president it ever had for a good full back. Rogers Hornsby's young men lost seven out of eight games to the Pirates and, after some subsequent experiences in the east, the management decides that he hasn't a pennant in his pocket.

Chicago has had great player managers, such as Fielder Jones and Frank Chance, but it is likely to be a hard spot when precept and practice are to be expected of one person. If Hornsby as manager had been at the top of his form as a player he might have urged his young men to look at their batting averages and find what they could to admire in them. The teacher who can't himself do the sum may cane the little boys who can't, but they will feel that the thing is against nature and that life is a bundle of injustices. Hornsby might have been a more successful manager if he never had hit .424.

Chicago's frustrated ambition for a world flag has become a bit wistful. The eighth and ninth innings have come to contain much distress for many citizens who would be quite cheerful at dinner if they heard better news before they went home. They would be more patient with the children and less abrupt with the wife. If they knew a pennant was just around the corner they would think it was hand in hand with prosperity. They might even pay some attention to the election.

Chicago will never be the place it ought to be to them until its ball clubs cease to fill them with despair of ever realizing the highest hopes of man. The saddest words are "they lost." Even a bull market could not relieve this depression.

Editorial of the Day

[The Washington Post.]

Imports into the United States during June exceeded exports. This is the third time since 1926 that a monthly trade balance has been adverse to this country. But the international balance remains favorable on account of factors other than shipment of goods. Too much emphasis is laid upon export and import trade in calculating the international balance. The transfer of merchandise between nations is only one of many items in the account. It is customary for this country to export more goods abroad than it buys from other countries, because America has vast resources that supply urgent demands of other people. For example, the export of American cotton continues in a large volume in spite of the depression. It is natural that this country should have a continuing favorable balance of trade, even though it is the world's foremost creditor nation.

This does not mean, however, that all the gold in the world will be accumulated in the United States to pay the difference between the value of American exports and imports. Last year, in spite of hard times, American tourists spent 570 million dollars in other countries. Foreign travelers in the United States left only 112 million dollars, making an adverse balance for the United States of 458 million dollars. Since the excess of exports over imports amounted to only 331 million dollars during that year, it is apparent that tourist expenditures form a more important item in the international balance of payments than does trade.

Other large items included in the list of "invisible exports" must also be considered. Immigrants who have come to America to make a living sent 172 million dollars to relatives in their native countries in 1931. There is nothing on the other side of the ledger to offset this outflow of capital. The American people contributed 39 million dollars last year to foreign charities. In all the "invisible exports" amount to nearly one billion dollars.

While the United States is anxious to maintain its export markets, and insists that Europe pay its debts contracted in good faith during and after the war, this country sends capital into all parts of the world. Foreign lending will be resumed as soon as confidence in the economic structure of the world has been restored. Immigrant remittances and tourist travel continue on a grand scale in spite of hard times.

The account with other nations should not be squared by lowering the tariff and destroying the prosperity of the people. The balance is easily maintained by tourist travel and similar means that do not jeopardize the American standard of living. American tourists spend in France five times as much as that country pays on its war debt. Italians living in America send their relatives twice as much as Rome pays to Washington on account of debts.

A lot of unnecessary argument has been devoted to the international balance of payments. If the public would remember that this balance takes account of many items besides war debts and shipments of goods there would be less misunderstanding as to the effect of American policies upon the equilibrium of the world.

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

HEART TROUBLE.

What can I do when your heart refuses
To walk sedately and dignified;
But rather chuckles a bit, and chooses
To skip and dance by your side?

My mirror sighs, "You are old, my lady,
See this wrinkle—this silver hair?
Sit on the bench where it's cool and shady.
Do not dance in the noonday glare."

But my heart is wayward, and will not listen
Nor do the things it is told to do.
Why shouldn't I dance, when I walk with you!

MARJORIE F. W.

ROGERS HORNSBY HAS JOINED Bill Killefer, Rabbit Maranville, George Gibson, and Joe McCarthy as one of the ex-Cubs managers of the last decade. Whatever the merits of the contentions or differences which dictated his departure during the height of a season while his team was battling for a pennant, fans will have their say; no doubt revive the Hornsby-McCarthy arguments which followed the appointment of Rogers as manager just before the city series of 1930.

In most other enterprises the public accepts appointment of a new head without comment and awaits results. Not so with your baseball fans. Because baseball is a quasi-public institution, Mr. Fan is privileged to criticize or make suggestions at any time. That he regards as his unalienable right. It is fortunate for baseball this is so. It is customer interest and enthusiasm which causes turnstiles to click.

The quondam Wake, now Wake-Line, never has gone in heavily for managing Cubs or White Sox from the press coop. Primarily, it would be usurpation of fan prerogative. We do not concede that in a few hours per day we could not do a better job than men whose entire twenty-four hours is devoted to weighing the diamond problems of their teams and trying to improve that standard. Sometimes we even envy fans their privilege.

Because of our conservative nature, however, we'll simply accept the situation, realizing that success means more, financially at least, to Cubs owners than any one else. So here's wishing good luck to Hornsby in whatever station he elects at the expiration of his contract, for which he receives full salary, although not acting as manager, and here's best wishes conjointly to Charley Grimm, his successor, and the Cubs he is picked to pilot.

TAXES.

While our congressmen are sitting
Where they do the nation's knitting,
There are joyous sounds arising from the bog.
For the billions we are giving
Are providing much "Love Living"
For the happy little bureaucratic frog.

What the spendthrifts now are wasting,
Will give us some pastry tasting
Like the frosting on a slice of soviet;
And the pies that they are cooking
Are so rich and juicy looking
That our confiscation taxes we'll forget.

All the joys of communism
In the colors of the prism
Are now painted by a most alluring ray.
And if we just keep on going
On the road this light is showing
All the nation may be bankrupt any day.

All the graft they fill their bag on Smells just like a garbage wagon—
Bureaucratic domination
With its taxing aberration
Soon will write on Freedom's headstone "Taxed to Death."

H. G. M.

SPEAKING OF TAXES, WITH what feelings of grateful reverence we regard our Washington statesmen who appropriated $2,500,000 for a marble palace as a training academy for the coast guard to learn rum running defense. By we we simply mean those of us now paying an extra cent tax on each gallon of gasoline, one cent extra on every letter mailed, two cents on each bank check, various cents at the movie, ad infinitum, with the big accounting to come next March 15 when income tax statements are filed.

THE STORY OF THE NOSE.

THE human face is dominated by the nose. There are those with unforgettable eyes, others with mouths that catch the attention. Some are distinctive because of the brow and others are noted for their chins. But when the results of the census are recorded it is found that the nose leads all the rest.

If the cartoonist were forbidden the right to use the human nose in making his point his task would be made more difficult and his results less satisfactory.

In determining racial origin the shape of the nose is second only to the size and shape of the orifice of the eyelids, and this characteristic ranks first only because of the large number of orientals. Nose shape has even entered anthropological discussion. The Irish race is probably an amalgamation of several racial stocks. Among the source stocks is one that came by sea from the south and probably from the Mediterranean. There is a theory that these immigrants were some of the lost tribes of Israel. Those who oppose this view say the Jewish nose, with its marked convexity, could not be the progenitor of the Irish pug nose. On the other hand, there are reports based on measurements which indicate that the Hebrew in America is changing the shape of his nose as well as the contour of his cranium.

Since the nose is such a dominating feature, and since it is a bony structure, in the main it is not easy to understand why it changes with the years. A baby at birth has almost no nose surrounding the two openings in his face, known as nostrils. As time passes the baby's nose rises up to form a perpendicular ridge, but the high bridge is not there until years after birth. There are few hook-nosed children, although there are many adults with this characteristic.

The height of the nose is largely determined by the bony partition known as the septum. This partition divides the nasal cavity into two parts and, what is more important from the standpoint of facial expression, it is the pole that holds up the circus tent. In this instance it is the wall that holds up the nose bones. Let us not overlook the importance of this nasal septum in fixing the features and, doing so, let us be more careful of it.

Chrome plating and the use of chromic acid in industry is very much on the increase. One of the untoward effects of chrome poisoning is the production of holes in the nasal septum. Sometimes this structure is pretty well destroyed in an extreme case of chromic poisoning. The chemical appears to have an affinity for the tissues of the nasal septum. Tertiary syphilis has a tendency to destroy this partition and, in doing so, to cause the bridge of the nose to cave in. The cells of the septum seem to have an affinity for this poison. Because of the importance of this partition operations on the nasal septum should not be lightly undertaken.

CRAB LICE.

H. B. G. writes: Please name an inexpensive but effective formula for destroying the nits of crab lice. The victim has a mild case. These awful insects seem to entrench themselves in the pores of the trunks and limbs. Scrupulous cleanliness has not helped to prevent their constant reappearance after removal and more drastic treatment appears to be required.

REPLY.

Washing with warm vinegar is an inexpensive and efficient method of getting rid of nits. But that is only a small part of the problem. The adult insects live in the underwear. They go on the body to feed and to lay. You will fail unless you kill the adults in the clothing and on the body, and then destroy the nits.

EATING OF LIVER.

Miss E. writes: I can eat only a small quantity of liver, so I broil a half pound of it a few minutes and then put it into a meat press. I get about three tablespoons of blood, which I drink once a day. By taking liver this way, is it of any value in helping me to overcome a noticeable but not very serious degree of anemia?

REPLY.

If you have pernicious anemia you need liver, liver extract, or stomach extract or juice.

If your anemia is not of the pernicious type you need eggs, juicy meats, green vegetables, and a tonic of iron and copper. Trying to get a liver juice is punishing your stomach unduly, since your anemia is not of the kind that calls especially for liver.

IT ALL DEPENDS.

Mrs. W. A. G. writes: Is an irregular heart dangerous? Can it be cured? Would it be harmful for a woman with an irregular heart to bear children?

REPLY.

There are several causes of irregular pulse. Among them are nervousness, goiter, excessive use of tobacco or coffee, and certain diseases of the heart valves, vessels, muscles, or nerves. Some cases of irregular pulse are of no importance. Some call for no treatment. Some are dangerous.

MINERAL OIL.

REPLY.

FOOT CALLUS.

C. W. F. writes: I was told to soak my feet in one quart of hot water as hot as could be borne and 1½ tablespoons Epsom salts and to keep the feet in the water for about one hour. After doing this for three or four days the calluses stuck to my socks and came right off and I haven't been bothered since.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

WIDENING AVONDALE AVENUE.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—[Friend of the People.]—Will you please give me any information you might have on the Avondale avenue proposition? Property has been condemned for this highway, but we can't obtain information from the highway department as to when work will begin. E. M. P.

The filing of the assessment roll was held in abeyance at the request of some of the property owners whose property will be affected by this assessment, because of the fact that there was a movement on foot at that time for the condemnation of property in this vicinity for a small park, which, if consummated, would affect the legality of this proceeding, and also because of the expense involved. This proceeding provided for an 80 foot highway. Some time ago I was advised that an effort was being made by the property owners to secure the cooperation of the state and county to have this taken care of without expense to them. From information I have received it seems that the county has taken over that part of this project north of Bryn Mawr avenue and will pave a stretch of forty feet this year. The state, as soon as possible, will pave that portion south of Bryn Mawr avenue in connection with their arterial highway. In order to avoid the expense of condemnation of land where improvements are affected the street will retain its present width—viz.: 66 feet. Owing to the facts mentioned in the foregoing, the original proceeding for the widening of Avondale avenue between North Central avenue and Ozanam avenue will be dismissed and the project abandoned. B. F. LINDHEIMER,
President, Board of Local Improvements.

I have been told that it is unnecessary to appear. 2. Also, I have been told she will obtain her divorce anyway. Is this true? 3. Will my failure to appear in court be contempt of court? T. R. J.

1. Unless you appear, she might obtain an unreasonably large allimony.
2. Depends on her proof.
3. No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CLOSING ESTATE.

Elmwood Park, Ill., Aug. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A year ago last March I was informed by an attorney in a small town in this state that my grandmother made me a legatee in her estate. I was never informed as to what I was to receive and I thought at the end of the year in probate I would receive what was coming to me. I have written and asked the attorney three different times for a copy of the will and he ignores my request. All the information he gave me was that everything in the estate was time certificates and the banks refuse to pay out until times are better. 1. Am I entitled to a copy of the will, being a legatee? 2. Can the bank hold up distribution of my share of the estate? 3. What if the bank should fail in the meantime? E. M.

1. The executor is under no legal obligation to give you a copy, but you can secure a copy from the clerk of the court by paying him.
2. Your statement that it is being held up is an answer to the question that you ask. Your chances of forcing the closing of the estate depend on the wording of the will.
3. The effect of failure of the bank will depend on the state of the assets, upon the sufficiency of the executor's bond, if any, and on other facts that are not before us.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 4, 1916.

LONDON.—Revival on a large scale of the German submarine warfare on commerce is indicated by the increase in the number of vessels reported sunk within what is believed the last 36 hours, in authentic statements made public today. Reports from the admiralty, from Lloyd's, and from other sources show that three British, one Italian, three Swedish, one Norwegian, one Danish, and two Finnish vessels have been destroyed. Several trawlers, names unknown, also have been sunk. In addition, German warships have seized two Swedish vessels.

LONDON.—The French before Verdun today began a mighty smash at the German lines on the mile front from Thiaumont to Fleury and forced their way forward for the most important gains made by them in that sector for months. The official report issued in Paris said the French had penetrated the outskirts of Fleury, but unofficial dispatches asserted the entire village had been captured. This, if true, would give them control of points of the greatest strategic value and perhaps cause the retirement of the German forces on both sides of the reconquered land.

NORFOLK, Va.—The allied cruisers patrolling the entrance to Hampton Roads to prevent the departure of the German submarine merchantman Deutschland still were in position within sight of shore this evening, and there was nothing to indicate that they were aware of the passage of the Deutschland out through the capes last night.

ROME.—[illegible] says that two Austrian aeroplanes dropped bombs on Biscegliè, an Italian seaport on the Adriatic near Bari. Six persons were wounded. The material damage was slight.

BERLIN.—The raid last night by German Zeppelins resulted in the dropping of a great number of explosive and fire bombs on London, on the fleet base at Harwich, and on industrial establishments in the county of Norfolk, says an official statement. The Zeppelins were attacked by light British forces, but all returned undamaged, the statement says.

WASHINGTON.—Prevented by existing legislation from any active intervention in the threatened railroad strike at this time, the federal government is preparing for later activity. The day's developments at Washington were in brief: Completion of the United States board of mediation and control by appointment of third member. Calling meeting of senate committee to consider the Newlands resolution, set for tomorrow. Perusal of data by President Wilson and department of labor after conference with Mediation Commissioner Chambers.

CHICAGO.—Half a dozen persons were injured more or less severely by a thunderstorm and tornado-like wind that put a violent check on Chicago's returning heat wave after it had run the mercury up to 94 degrees.

LONDON.—Four Americans arrested in Ireland in connection with the rebellion and interned ever since have appealed for release to an advisory board provided to hear such cases. No decision yet has been given by the committee. The persons involved include John [illegible]gallen, Peter Fox, William Gilmartin, and Michael Joseph Lynch.

POLITICS IN THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Chicago, July 27.—The comment on your editorial, "City Funds and the Teachers," voices, I am sure, the opinion of thousands of us teachers. So far no group of teachers has officially condemned the board of education. Committees have been sent to the mayor, to the bankers, to the legislature. Some childish voice wailed: "Misery loves company. Don't pay any city employé till you pay us!" What panacea can all this prove to be for us teachers? None at all!

The seat of all our troubles lies in the school board. Its function is to pay the teachers and to keep the schools open. Since they failed in their obligation, the members should automatically be out. Why should the teachers buffet about with their complaints instead of going to the source of their ills? No such tragic-comic group of individuals supposed to serve the public should be allowed to remain in office; and the teachers should see that they go. Surely this absurd condition of schools and politics should continue no further. I, as a mother of three children in the public grammar schools and as a teacher in one of the public high schools, urge that your paper take up the crusade of divorcing our public schools from politics. My compliments to you on your terse and excellent editorial. Would that some of the twenty-six teachers' organizations could publicly see the light! LYDIA LEE PEARCE.

FAST FREIGHT.

Chicago, July 29.—Railroads have contributed more than their share toward prosperity. Now they are suffering more than their share of ills.

One of the ills is the character of the service they are still required to render to hold their business. Freight trains are too frequently run and without proper tonnage to permit the railways to earn a profit.

In order to keep the trains running—as the public demands—expenses, outside of freight train expenses, are cut down to preserve a proper ratio of expenses to revenues. The standard of way and structures is reduced, the standard of maintenance of equipment is reduced, and these reductions mean men and material, compensation for which would go much further in producing buying power than the money paid out for the extra train service.

It once was logical to produce and expect fast freight service, but fast freight service is now an extravagance and the people who demand it are the people who are suffering and passing it on. It is time for the public to awaken to the fact that this fast service keeps all railroads in competition on an unremunerative basis, and therefore the public without being materially benefited is suffering the results of an unwise distribution of money.

The railways are handling freight on express schedules, but at freight rates. And there is little likelihood that the people would demand the service on any other basis. Now that the volume of business is diminished the consequences of continued present service can be easily reckoned in dollars and cents unwisely spent. THOMAS C. KIERNAN.

PLAIN PEDICULOUS.

Chicago, July 27.—Carey Orr is the finest cartoonist working today, but his cartoon in this morning's paper was just plain pediculous, referring to the soldier who says, "I had a good time in the army."

Maybe a few gold bricks did have a good time (we even had them up in the lines), but any ex-service man will tell you that it was no picnic at any time—in any branch of the service.

You will find that this cartoon will be resented by ex-service men more than anything so far. EDW. M. VANA,
C. F. FLOYD.

MODERN PAINTINGS.

Chicago, July 31.—I want to express my appreciation of the fine thing you have done for art in Chicago by reproducing the work of two of the great modern painters—both beautiful examples—the Rousseau an extraordinary one. EVE WATSON SCHUTZE.

HOW ABOUT PERSONAL INCOMES?

Decatur, Ga., July 25.—Certain newspapers delight in telling us that certain states of the Union take more money out of the federal treasury than they actually pay into it in taxes. They base this statement upon reports of tax collections by the treasury department. This reasoning, however, is fallacious, as a moment's reflection will show.

Consider the tariff taxes. They are credited to states having ports of entry. Inland states pay their proportionate share, but this share is not credited to those states in the treasury figures.

Consider also the cigaret and tobacco taxes. They are collected in North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky, and credited to those states. However, they are paid mostly by the people of other states.

The same is true of other items of federal taxation.

I doubt if it is possible to tell what part of federal taxation is paid by the people of any particular state. The truth of the matter is the very nature of these taxes would indicate that they are spread pretty evenly among the people of the United States. JOHN EDGAR.

THE PROGRESSIVE CHANGES.

Of course we need changes in governmental methods, but let the changes be progressive and without reversion to conditions as they were 50 years ago. Then private interest was rampant. Carnegie made his millions from the blood and sweat of underpaid workers. Private companies raped the trees and lumber from 50 mile wide roadways through Wisconsin. Railroads were manipulated to the detriment of thousands of small stockholders. How many manufacturers would wish to go back to the private bargaining and secret rebate methods of the earlier railroad days?

Instead of less governmental supervision we shall need more. Private business and the business man in general has failed even in helping himself.

National planning is universally advocated. But will your private corporations distribute their work so more can share? Not without direction.

In the large and essential industries I can see no other course for the democracy but more control. It's up to the people to both teach and learn the necessity of sharing in governmental responsibility. M. C. BERGWALL.

BILL DELIVERY.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—In a letter to this office dated July 27, the second assistant postmaster general, division of railway adjustments, invites attention to a clipping from a recent issue of your newspaper, in which a Mr. George H. Walf asks whether he may legally deliver monthly bills of merchants, the article, dated June 25, being printed in the Voice of the People column.

Relative thereto the official named directs this office to inform you that there is no legal objection to a business concern having its monthly bills, statements, etc., delivered by its regular salaried employés as a part of their duties, it being immaterial whether or not the bills are inclosed in envelopes. It is only where such deliveries are made by outside parties under contract or on a piecework basis that the law is violated. This applies to the delivery of all matter of the character of letters outside of the mails without the payment of postage.

ARTHUR C. LUEDER,
Postmaster.

THE SHERIFF.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—As a subscriber to THE TRIBUNE for thirty years I'd like to ask what has the sheriff of Cook county done to warrant your very evident criticism? Or what has he not done? I voted for him because of your ardent articles, even editorials, in his behalf. Now I find your paper and several others in Chicago giving him what seems to me very unwarranted criticism. Why the change, please? L. O'QUAX.

Brother Charges Brother with Theft of Furniture

Francis Kellerman, 38 years old, 5929 South Racine avenue, was taken into custody yesterday by Detective Albert Hahn of the detective bureau on complaint of the Waukegan police, who had been asked to arrest him on a warrant charging larceny. According to Deputy Sheriff John Sweeney of Waukegan, who took his prisoner back last night, Kellerman is accused by his brother, Edward Kellerman, of having taken furniture valued at $750 from the latter's lake cottage. Francis Kellerman was invited to spend the week-end at the cottage by his brother, and during the latter's absence had the furniture carted away, it is alleged.

Cashier, Alone in Indiana Bank, Robbed of $2,500

Two gunmen yesterday bound and gagged Cashier J. M. Givens and took $2,500 from the First State bank of Porter, 15 miles east of Gary. Givens, who was alone in the bank, requested the bandits to leave his keys on the bank step. Later Givens freed himself and attracted the attention of a passer-by, Schuyler King, who recovered the keys and freed him.

Bain Tells Court of Profit on Sales to His Own Banks

John Bain described his real estate deals with his own banks yesterday as he continued his testimony defending himself against the charge of conspiracy brought as a result of the collapse of his bank chain last summer. He was on the witness stand all day before Judge John M. O'Connor, who is hearing the charges against Bain, his sons, and his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher, without a jury.

Bain frequently made profits in the sale of land or buildings to his banks for their quarters, he admitted. But always, he asserted, he apprised the directors that he was making such a profit. Then, he said, he would relinquish the gavel and frequently leave the room while the other directors voted to accept his proposition.

$7,000 Profit on Deal.

One such deal concerned the site of the West Highland State bank, at 79th street and Ashland avenue. With Eric Weigel, who later was president of that bank, E. E. Elmore, and Michael Maisel, now dead, Bain bought the land for $47,955 in 1922, he said. The bank was organized in November, 1923, and the land sold to it for $55,000.

"I told the directors and stockholders I was part owner of the property and was making a profit on the purchase, but that I considered the price reasonable. I would say that the property had doubled in value since we bought it."

Bain said that he made nothing on acquisition of the site and building for the Gage Park bank at 59th street and Kedzie avenue. He and former Senator Charles S. Deneen profited by the sale of a site to the West Lawn State bank at 63d street and Crawford avenue, he testified.

They bought the land, which had a 200 foot frontage, for $150,000 in May, 1925. Two years later they sold 50 front feet to the bank. Later the rest of the plot was sold to the bank. Bain admitted that the testimony of a prosecution witness that there was a $51,000 profit on the sale might have been correct if the whole 200 front feet were considered.

The Inlander-Meyer Trust syndicate, in which Bain participated, made a profit of $20,000 on the sale of the Auburn Park Trust and Savings bank property to the directors, he testified. He then explained a sale and resale of the site of the Brainerd State bank site, at 87th street and Western avenue, in which Frank A. Mulholland, who was indicted with Bain, but obtained a separate trial, figured.

The Inlander-Meyer trust bought the property in 1925, Bain said, and shortly sold it to Mulholland for $145,000. Eric Weigel, he said, convinced him later that the property was a good site for a bank. Mulholland held out, Bain asserted, until he was given his investment back with 6 per cent interest and a $15,000 bonus and allowed to retain a third interest in the property.

When Bain bought stock in the Armitage State bank at 3213 Armitage avenue he likewise bought a lot at 3400 Armitage avenue, he testified. After the state auditor had refused permission to open a new bank on that plot, on the ground that it was too close to the existing bank, Bain sold the land to the Armitage State for a new building site at a $20,000 profit, he said.

Describes Formation of Trust.

Later Bain described the organization of John Bain, Inc., the investment trust in which all of his banks took stock. It owed the banks $625,000 in gold notes and $280,000 in notes of hand, principally as a result of taking over other Bain trusts at the time of the bank crash, Bain testified.

He also gave his opinion of the value of numerous properties on which he had borrowed from his banks, asserting in each case that his equity in the property was sufficient collateral for the loan. Near the end of the hearing his attorney, Francis X. Busch, introduced a statement of Bain's assets, exclusive of his bank stock and investment trust holdings, which were valued by the statement at $2,024,704 at the time of the crash last summer. This was done, Attorney Busch said, to show that Bain was solvent at that time.

DEMOCRATS PICK 2 CANDIDATES FOR SUPERIOR COURT

Two judges of the Municipal court have been slated by the Democratic county organization to be nominated for two vacancies on the Superior bench.

They are James F. Fardy and Francis B. Allegretti. The vacancies were caused by the deaths of Albert C. Barnes, Republican veteran of long service in the Appellate court, and Martin J. Isaacs, who was serving his first term when he died. Gov. L. L. Emmerson has called a special election to fill the two places. The special election will be held in connection with general election, Nov. 8.

Deny Secret Pact for "Split."

It is emphatically denied that there is any secret coalition agreement with the Republicans to "split" the two places. A proposal to that effect was made to Mayor Cermak several months ago and he rejected it emphatically. The Republican organization has not yet taken any steps toward slating its candidates.

The facts concerning the Democratic developments were disclosed in connection with a meeting of the party's county committee yesterday. It also was reported that John A. Cervenka Jr. will be slated for the place left open on the Municipal court ticket now held by Judge Fardy.

The latter has been renominated for the city bench, but if he is nominated for the Superior court he will withdraw from the former nomination and the open spot on the ballot will be filled by the city central committee meeting in convention.

Hold Convention Sept. 14.

The Superior court nominations will be made at a county convention called for Sept. 14.

One vacancy on the state central committee also came to the attention of the county committee. That was caused by the death of William Kells of the 7th congressional district. The county committee favors the election of Joseph F. Higgins, member of the board of local improvements and ward committeeman from the 32d. This vacancy is to be filled by the state committee itself at its next meeting.

MANILA LEGISLATORS VOTE DOWN REPEAL OF PRESS GAG LAW

MANILA, Aug. 3.—Repeal of the Philippine press gag law was voted down, 14 to 1, in a house committee today in a test ballot to determine the committee's sentiment.

The present law, effective since Jan. 1, makes publication of any material reflecting on the private life, integrity or reputation of individuals, even when a part of sworn court testimony, punishable by one to four years' imprisonment or a fine of $500 to $1,000. The law makes the mere fact of publication prima facie evidence of malice.

The law, passed as a joker in the revised penal code, was unnoticed for several months. When it came to notice, a strong campaign for its repeal began. Quarrels in the legislature already have resulted in the fatal shooting of Enrique Laygo, an editorial writer for the Spanish daily, El Debate, by a brother of Representative Dimayuga.

150 HORSES ARE RESCUED FROM STOCKYARD FIRE

One hundred and fifty horses, many of them fine saddle stock, were saved by employes after fire attacked four barns of the Union Stockyards Transit company, 43d and South Halsted streets, late yesterday afternoon. The fire was extinguished after damage totaling $20,000 had been caused.

The cause of the fire was unknown. The barns and the horses in them are the property of Harry McNair, horse commissioner, who lives at 5124 Hyde Park boulevard. A 2-11 alarm was sounded when the fire threatened to spread to other structures in the stockyards. A number of battalions responded. Fire Captain Frank O'Connor was cut on the right arm when a skylight fell on him, and he was taken to the German Deaconess hospital.

Boy, 18, Kills Brother, 14, in Quarrel Over Ball Game

Danville, Ill., Aug. 3.—(AP)—In a trivial quarrel over a ball game, Paul Newberry, 18, shot and killed his brother, Mark, 14, at their home here last night. Paul was held in jail today pending investigation of the tragedy. "I only meant to frighten him," he told police.

GERMAN FLYERS HERE; MAP TRIP ACROSS PACIFIC

Methodical Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, who landed on the lake front Tuesday on his third annual visit to Chicago, conferred at length yesterday afternoon with Maj. James H. Doolittle, director of aviation for the Shell Petroleum company, on the exact location of refueling depots established by the oil company along the flyer's projected route to Japan.

The German flying school director demonstrated his customary thoroughness by the care with which he studied the maps and charts and the many questions he had to ask of Maj. Doolittle about the nature of the country and the sea over which he plans to fly.

Tune Motors for Sea Hop.

In the morning he had visited his plane, the Groenland Wal, at anchor at the mouth of the river coast guard station, and left two of his crew of three to inspect the two 700 horse power BMW motors. Mechanic Franz Haak and Radio Operator Fritz Albrecht worked at that task all day. Co-Pilot Ghert von Roth helped Capt. von Gronau plan the route to Japan.

Last night Capt. von Gronau and his three aids planned to take in some of Chicago's night life, accompanied by friends they had made on previous visits. Their plans for today include more work on the plane this morning and attendance at a tea at the Illinois Women's Athletic club at 4 p. m.

Except for the inspection of his flying boat, Capt. von Gronau remained in seclusion in his suite at the Bismarck hotel yesterday, attending to business matters and correspondence, among which were telegrams of congratulation from Gen. Italo Balbo, head of the Italian air ministry, who plans to bring a fleet of fifty flying boats to Chicago next year for the World's Fair.

Leaves City Tomorrow.

Capt. von Gronau talked again of the feasibility of an air mail line between the United States and Europe along the northern route, along the general route he has followed on his three crossings of the ocean by air. The route he proposes has been laid out by Trans-American Air lines and franchises for the necessary bases along the route have been secured from the various countries. These have been turned over to Pan-American Airways, which encircle South America, for development.

Tomorrow the German flyer plans to take off for Milwaukee around noon, he said, en route to Winnipeg, and then the Pacific coast. His plans for departure for Japan are still indefinite, he said, repeating that he is in no hurry.

150 HORSES ARE RESCUED FROM STOCKYARD FIRE

One hundred and fifty horses, many of them fine saddle stock, were saved by employes after fire attacked four barns of the Union Stockyards Transit company, 43d and South Halsted streets, late yesterday afternoon. The fire was extinguished after damage totaling $20,000 had been caused.

The cause of the fire was unknown. The barns and the horses in them are the property of Harry McNair, horse commissioner, who lives at 5124 Hyde Park boulevard. A 2-11 alarm was sounded when the fire threatened to spread to other structures in the stockyards. A number of battalions responded. Fire Captain Frank O'Connor was cut on the right arm when a skylight fell on him, and he was taken to the German Deaconess hospital.

Boy, 18, Kills Brother, 14, in Quarrel Over Ball Game

Danville, Ill., Aug. 3.—(AP)—In a trivial quarrel over a ball game, Paul Newberry, 18, shot and killed his brother, Mark, 14, at their home here last night. Paul was held in jail today pending investigation of the tragedy. "I only meant to frighten him," he told police.

CITY TO APPEAL RULING IN POLICE PROMOTION CASE

Francis J. Vurpillat, assistant corporation counsel, announced yesterday that the city would appeal the decision of Superior Judge Charles A. Williams in a mandatory action brought by nine city patrolmen who charged that they were discriminated against in the promotions to sergeancies in 1930. The court ruling held that Commissioner of Police Allman should appoint the petitioning policemen to sergeancies immediately.

The appeal will be based on the grounds that the petitioning policemen were eligible to promotion from a list that has since been canceled and superseded by a new eligibility list, and that the policemen have waited beyond a reasonable length of time to press their charges. City officials are confident that the decision will be reversed and will have no effect on the council order that no vacancies shall be filled without council authority.

DENIES PLEA FOR A RECEIVER FOR INSURANCE CO.

Superior Judge William J. Lindsay yesterday refused to appoint a receiver for the Old Colony Life Insurance company, as was asked in the petition of Mrs. Theresa Stengel, 1825 Orchard street, but he ordered attorneys for the company to answer her bill, which charged that the concern is insolvent. The matter will be referred to a master in chancery for hearings during the fall term of court.

Attorney William McKinlay, representing the insurance company, offered to fulfill Mrs. Stengel's request for a loan upon her policy which was made early in June. Her counsel, George D. Kimball, informed Judge Lindsay that the case had gone beyond the stage where it could be settled and refused to accept the offer.

GROUP TO FIGHT CRANE COLLEGE TUITION CHARGE

An organization of students, teachers, and alumni of Crane Junior college has been formed to protest against the proposed $100 tuition fee for next year. A subcommittee of the board of education headed by Trustee H. Wallace Caldwell is considering the tuition plan as an economy measure.

The protesting group, called the Crane college no tuitions committee, is led by four students, Lawrence Singer, Ruth Ellman, Hymen Milgrom, and Helen Appleman.

The organization contends the tuition charge would prevent 80 per cent of the students at Crane from attending next year and that Chicago should provide a free city college as New York does.

Loans to Railroads Are Not Gifts

In the first five months of its operation the Reconstruction Finance Corporation received applications for $378,700,000, authorized $213,880,000 and actually advanced $146,650,000 in government loans to railroads.

This money is used, in different cases, to pay taxes, interest, payrolls, purchases and maturing indebtedness.

These loans are not gifts. They are approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, are secured by ample collateral and bear interest until repaid.

Such loans are not made to help the railroads or their owners but to prevent national financial disaster.

Emergency measures are important, but they are not permanent. There must be restoration of railway earning power. The public can help by making use of railway services and seeing that the railroads get a fair deal.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

"One box does a lot of work," says Mrs. W. F. Allen of Cleveland

"RINSO gets my clothes clean and white easily. I don't even have to scrub or boil them. And it's so safe for the clothes. I've found that one big box does a lot of work. Besides mopping up the floors 3 times, washing the dishes 3 times a day for 6 days, I laundered these clothes—all with only one big box of Rinso:

1 bedspread, 1 bureau scarf, 4 face cloths, 9 napkins, 5 pillow cases, 3 sheets, 2 table-cloths, 13 towels, 8 dish towels, 28 handkerchiefs, 5 pairs children's stockings, 4 pieces children's underwear, 5 children's nightclothes, 2 house-dresses, 1 nightgown, 2 aprons, 2 pieces underwear, 4 nightclothes, 13 shirts, 4 rag rugs

"Venus with Us," by William M. Marston." [Sears.]

THE two novels at hand today are in many superficial ways similar. Both are set in Italy. One describes the degeneracy of an era and the other the degeneracy of a family, and both are, in their separate fields, brilliantly handled.

"The Indifferent Ones" has been acclaimed by Italian critics who compare the author to D'Annunzio and Pirandello. His genius and technique are said by others to remind one of Flaubert, Proust, Gide, Joyce, and the great psychiatrist Freud. The author, twenty-five years old, was before the publication of the novel comparatively unknown except for a few random short articles he had contributed to a literary review.

"The Indifferent Ones" resembles some of D'Annunzio's more self-conscious novels in its preoccupation with sensuality and its curious, mordant attitude, based on despair, a literary despair that is the theme of the book.

The term "literary" must be used throughout the evaluation of the book because, despite its emphasis on the sordid aspects of realism, it encompasses realism with a vengeance and never touches reality, and because in this strange, black, demonic half world of sex which somehow suggests the horrors of a disease haunted swamp (the essence of this book is in the fluid that was on Bovary's lips, around which a black fly buzzed), not a ray of light is allowed to penetrate—and true reality is neither all black nor all white.

All of the characters and events in the book are completely despicable and unpleasant. Such an array of disgusting people performing disgusting acts is not often found in contemporary fiction. There is Mariagrazie, the mother of two grown children, a woman of degenerate beauty, morals, and mind (you can almost see the worms of destruction devouring her flesh), who loves Leo, an equally degraded person, falling to pieces with mental and moral rottenness.

Carla, the daughter, is a dark beauty, unconscious of sin or of sinfulness, exercising the charm of her sex upon her mother's lover. Michele, her brother, a mean fellow struggling with himself to become conscious of good and evil (and a losing fight it is), loves Lisa, the former mistress of Leo and a woman of complete coarseness and indecency.

The interrelations of this group form the substance of the novel. There is very little action. What does happen seems almost from the first page inevitable. So destiny marches on accompanied by the author's bitter and hateful analysis of these people's minds. It is a psychological novel of great power, though the reader is never once sympathetic with one of the characters.

Nevertheless, the book cannot soon be forgotten. Though it has no connection with life, it is a technical tour de force which commands the reader's reluctant respect. If the talent of Alberto Moravia is not completely lost in the morass of Freudianism at its worst, future great things may be expected of it. In the meantime the reader hies himself out into the fresh air, thankful that he can still breathe and enjoy it.

"Venus with Us" is a record of Rome at the time of the first Cæsar, Julius. The novel has been compared to "Quo Vadis?" and "Ben Hur" and in its scope and its panoramic view of the era the comparison is justified.

But in the approach of the author there is a considerable difference. William M. Marston all but puts his characters in modern dress. They speak in the current slang, they have a sophistication that is indeed familiar to modern ears and eyes and they, for the most part, in action and psychology, bear a definite contemporary stamp.

With the motto "Venus Nobiscum" always before him, Julius Cæsar pursues in the book his amazing career, one of the most thrilling and dramatic in the history of the western world. He was, according to the author, a sincere worshiper of women, and their influence on his life and decisions should not be overlooked.

In this book Julius Cæsar appears as one of the most intriguing men of his time, good looking in an effeminate way, with a delightfully humorous personality and with a will of iron. His affairs with women take up most of the pages, his affairs and his travels. We see him in Rome, in Gaul, in Britain and in Egypt, among other places, always accompanied by a retinue of worshiping women. But despite his libertinism the author makes the reader perpetually aware of his fearless character and his determination. Besides the contribution of the characterization of Cæsar, which is both brilliant and effective, the author gives to the reader a picture of the age in all its exotic and fascinating accouterments and is as irresistible as it is memorable. Glenwood Training School Opens Drive for Dollar Gifts

The investment of $1 "to help some youngster who hasn't had the good fortune that a lot of the rest of us have had," was asked yesterday in an appeal sent to friends of Glenwood Manual Training school by the president, N. C. Mather.

"A dollar is all we're asking for," the appeal stated, "because we believe public spirited men and women can spare that much without depriving themselves even of a chocolate soda or a package of cigarets. One dollar will help give a boy the chance he deserves to get a training and an education that will fit him for life and a living."

The Glenwood Manual Training school has been in operation for dependent and underprivileged boys for nearly forty-five years.

She will spend 6 weeks in intensive study of French at Tours and then will start her junior college year at the Sorbonne in Paris. She was on the honor roll at Vassar last year. This smart and pretty great-granddaughter of the first Carter Harrison and Sterling J. Morton, a member of the cabinet during President Cleveland's administration, made her debut during the Thanksgiving holidays in the winter of 1930-'31.

You Can Help the Infants Avoid Illness.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Ice is not a luxury. Ask the welfare worker. Ask the parish priest. Ask the physician. Ask any mother who has tried to keep her baby well despite the souring of the milk supply. Each will say that ice is a necessity. They will be agreed that its absence in a household may mean illness and death.

Yesterday only $23.07 arrived at THE TRIBUNE to swell the fund which endeavors to deliver free ice to hundreds of destitute families. A year ago the day's accumulation of gifts would have reached $200 to $300. Last year $7,000 was spent to keep needy families well. This year little more than $1,500 has made its way into the fund.

What will the families do? They've tried keeping a milk bottle under the cold water tap without success. They've set the milk in a pan of water and swathed the bottle in a wet cloth—but the milk soured. A cheerless awakening of a morning to find that a hungry wailing baby cannot be fed because the milk has spoiled.

The children have done their part. They've been spending their vacations thinking up ways to earn money for the ice fund. They've staged circuses, managed lemonade stands, put on parades, saved their allowance money and given amateur motion picture performances.

The youngsters fortunate enough to have plenty to eat and wear, are sincerely interested in the welfare of those who don't. All last winter they went to the same classes with them. They saw needy youngsters line up for free lunches. Now at vacation time the boys and girls who have comfortable homes are trying to help.

$5—Mrs. Wollam, J. S. L.
$1—Nibs, Free Ice fund.

Total	$ 23.07
Previously acknowledged	1,526.55
Grand total	$1,549.62

No contributions were received yesterday for the Camp Algonquin fund which supplies free vacations for mothers and children of the tenements at the camp supported in part by TRIBUNE readers. Ten dollars finances a two weeks' vacation. Last year nearly 2,000 were given vacations. Gifts to either fund may be sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower.

Postpone Band Concerts as Fund Drive Fails

Failure of a fund campaign has caused a temporary suspension of the free band concerts in Grant park, it was announced yesterday by P. A. Cavallo, leader of the concert band. The concert scheduled for tomorrow evening has been postponed to Aug. 19. Originally the concerts were to be financed by sale of advertising space in the program. This source of revenue failed and contributions were sought from business men.

Marriage Can't Be Listed Under Big Sacrifices

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Viola says, "Those men for whom girls are willing to make the great sacrifice of giving up a job and for whom they are willing to keep house——"

Say we, "Viola," where do you get that stuff about the "great sacrifice?" Among Mr. Webster's definitions of sacrifice you'll find, "To suffer to be lost for the sake of obtaining something; to give up in favor of a higher or more imperative object or duty."

Giving up a job and keeping house for a man we'll stand for a sacrifice on Mr. Webster's definition. But, don't forget, you're suffering something to be lost for the sake of obtaining something!

Personally we don't think marrying can be construed as a sacrifice at all. The job does not have to be given up to marry. It's given up willingly. It's given up because the girl is tired of it. It's given up because she doesn't see much future to it. It's given up because the hours look better as the wife of some man. Because the girl wants to be a Mrs.

And it is given up because the girl is in love and wants to marry. But it's no great sacrifice in the beginning.

We do hear a lot of poppycock about the sacrifices women make in marriage! About the years they sacrifice for a man. About the sacrifice in having children, and so on. True, some women do make sacrifices in marriage. Some women sacrifice everything for their children. But oftener it is because of bad management rather than great personal sacrifice.

Setting out with the idea that exchanging typewriter keys for a vacuum cleaner is a sacrifice is all wrong. There's a man with the vacuum cleaner. The man you want. The thing you want out of life. You make an exchange. But for something happier, more secure, more physically, spiritually and biologically normal.

So, get the idea out of your head, "Viola," that you're kin to the great martyrs in choosing matrimony over a job. You're not.

Brown's Style, but Black and White Linger

New Dark Shades May Make a Difference.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

As usual, all the first fall fashion hints that are getting around the town are the exciting reiterations about brown. Really, if you care to think back about it all, hasn't every August and September breeze for the last five or six years whispered most emphatically that Paris was going mad about brown? And, still thinking it over, didn't we all prepare for brown and wear and like it and then, after all the first fine excitement was over, didn't we live and learn that nothing ever takes the place of a good looking black and white ensemble?

This gay, and we hope, giddy season ahead of us is being advertised in the same manner, but the shades of brown are different and that may make a lot of difference. No fashion hound is going to spurn all the luscious golden browns, or the deep rich browns, that have as much depth as velvet.

This deep dark shade that is called Van Dyke brown is dark enough to be taken for black, except in strongest sunlight. It is darkly dramatic and will be ideal for proper contrasts of beige, old gold, carnation red, all shades of green, and practically every fashionable new color for frocks.

The first of the newest deep brown winter cloth coats use quantities of mink, kolinsky, blue fox and, as a news item heralding a new old idea, you are going to see lots of leopard collars and sleeves accenting all sorts of brown cloth coats. And how the coat makers have piled the fur trimming around our heads and neck! Every inch of fur is used with startling effect high on the anatomy. Cuffs, the old fashioned wrist enclosing kind, are as rare as an old fashioned, well rounded clothes allowance. Cuffs have grown up to wide lavish bands and half skins and are anchored way above the elbow and blend into the collars. The top of the winter silhouette is all fur; you can snuggle your half covered head into the depths of your coat collar and be as cozy as a bug in a rug.

Another thing the coat makers have done to slim all silhouettes is the matter of dispensing with skirt flares. Long straight lines accentuate the winter models in dresses, coats, and suits. Last winter saw the first of the fur sleeved coats. This year you are going to see lots more of them, half and full length affairs, and lots of deep prim looking capes and cape effects also of fur. Collars will be extremely high, achieving the most flattering of frames for the face. Stand-up collars will be smarter and newer than the old gently rolling long ones that trimmed last year's accepted models.

New things are arriving daily, all thrillingly different and exciting. They are arriving just in time, as the greater portion of us were languishing and bored with a bedraggled summer wardrobe and ready to revive our lagging appetites and to stimulate a good buying mood.

South Sea Island Fire Walkers May Appear at 1933 Fair

When the World's Fair opens one of the attractions will be the performance of seventeen South sea fire walkers if plans are approved by the board of directors of the exposition. An agreement has been signed between Chief Taaru of Tahiti and a private concern to bring a native retinue to the fair.

The fire walkers are the holy men of certain South sea island tribes. If a native is able to walk over a path of hot stones and burning embers without harm he is then regarded as favored of the gods.

Record Season of Opera Seen for Chicago

Groups Plan Total of 41 Weeks.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Something more than forty-one weeks of opera, three times as much as the Civic Opera company ever offered, will be given to Chicago this season if all the organizations promising visits here are able to go through with their plans.

First in point of time will be two performances of "Aida" and "Il Trovatore" in Soldiers' field Aug. 28 and 31. Next comes the Opera in English league, sixteen weeks at the Majestic theater, giving performances in the language indicated by its title. Word comes from the organization that its financing is now in so favorable a condition that the full season is assured. It will begin in October.

Twenty performances on a large scale at the Chicago Stadium, to be given on twenty successive Saturday nights, is another prospect that seems certain. The first will probably be "Aida," and the series will begin some time in October. In this, as in all the plans offered, admission prices will be low, never more than one-half of former operatic prices, and generally one-third or less.

Isaac Van Grove, a conductor of the Civic Opera company and general artistic director of the Cincinnati Opera company, seeks the reopening of the Auditorium with a season of twelve weeks. A misleading message earlier in the week led to the impression that it was the Cincinnati company that desired to come here. This, Mr. Van Grove explains, is not the case. What he has in mind is a new company with the same roster of artists and staff, or their equivalent, as appeared during the last Civic Opera season at the Civic Opera house. With operatic costs at their lowest in modern history and with good business management he is confident that a season can be run at a minimum deficit. He reports an increase of 27 per cent in receipts over last season in Cincinnati.

On something of the same theory, though different in details, is the Cosmopolitan Opera company, directed by Max Rabinoff, formerly general manager of the great dancer Pavlowa and also of the Boston Opera company. Organizing on a coöperative basis, he plans a season in New York during the fall, a later visit to Boston, and a season of ten weeks in Chicago still later. In the plans outlined by both him and Mr. Van Grove preference will be given to American artists, and especially those who are now in the country, though in neither case do they emphasize the use of the English language. It is understood that generous experiments will be made with the native tongue, with its future resting upon public response.

Fears of Dull Social Times Are Vanishing

Many Dances Are Planned for Yuletide.

BY JUDITH CASS.

IT may appear, when one reads about this girl and that girl not having a debut party this fall as if the poor little "debbies" were going to have rather a dull season. But when you hear about the dancing parties that are being planned for the Christmas holidays, you know that the season isn't going to be quiet or dull at all, on the contrary, it gives promise of being very gay and eventful.

Although the mothers all say that they are planning simple dances and not balls, there isn't much difference really, for all that the young people need to have a grand party, whether it is called a ball or a dance, is good music and plenty of "stags."

Few definite dates are settled yet, but it appears now as if there would be a dance every night during the last two weeks of December, and even if the "debs" had no other gayety than that, and they will, of course—wouldn't that be a wonderful season?

There are two parties scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 21, a dinner dance that the Edward R. Litsingers and the Wilbur Calhoun Smiths will give at the Casino for petite Eleanor Litsinger, who is to make her debut at a tea on Nov. 4, and a dance that the Seaborn Whatleys will give for their debutante daughter, Betty.

The Melvin A. Traylors are planning to give a dance for their daughter Nancy on Christmas eve, and Josephine Patterson and her mother, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, have reserved Dec. 28 as the date for Miss Patterson's debut dance.

Mrs. James M. Hopkins also is planning a dance for her daughter, Marjorie Goodman, some time during the holidays; the John Seniors expect to give one for their debutante daughter, Mary, and Mrs. Howard Fenton is considering Dec. 26 or 27 as a date for a dance for her daughter, Honore White, who is coming out at a tea on Sept. 17 at the Fentons' residence in Winnetka.

Edmund Doerings Plan Dance.

The Edmund Doerings started plans for a dance for the debutante in their family, Edna May, before they went east for the summer, although they also considered the Thanksgiving holidays as a suitable time instead of waiting for the Christmas vacation; the Frank Wilhelms, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, the Alden B. Swifts, the James E. Baums, Mrs. Edwin Seipp, and the Gustavus F. Swifts all were thinking last spring of debut balls for their daughters next winter, so if all the parties that are scheduled are given it certainly will be as gay a season as any little debutante could wish for.

Marjorie Goodman, by the way, is to be introduced formally to society at a tea to be given by her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Goodman, at their Astor street residence. The date is not set, although Nov. 11 is the one that is being thought of. Miss Goodman is visiting her grandparents at their summer place at Westbrook, Conn., now, but she and her younger sister, Kay, will come to Lake Forest fairly soon to join their mother, Mrs. Hopkins, who came straight here after landing from Europe about ten days ago. Miss Goodman was presented to the British sovereigns in June and her friends here anxiously are awaiting her return for she spent last winter abroad and has not been here since last autumn.

McLaughlins to Return Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. McLaughlin are expected back Sunday night from a ten days' fishing trip in the north woods and soon after that the date probably will be set for the mixed sixsome that they, the Charles Dennehys, and the James C. Cathcarts have to play to determine who wins the Benedict cup at the Onwentsia this season. It seems that we were misinformed last week when we wrote that the McLaughlins won the cup last year, for it was the Dennehys who won, defeating the Kent Chandlers with the final putt on the 18th green, the McLaughlins having fallen by the wayside early in the sixsome.

Our Charlevoix correspondent writes that the Chicago club cottagers are looking forward to more gayety this month than the early part of the summer. Mr. and Mrs. David B. McDougal of Geneva, Ill., have arrived there to be the house guests of the William B. McIlvaines for the rest of the season.

Dr. Eugene S. Talbot and Eugene Jr. have gone up to join Mrs. Talbot and the other children, who opened their cottage in early July. The Edward H. Hageys and their infant daughter, Joan, are at Mrs. A. Harris Whiting's cottage for a fortnight.

John P. Wilson joined Mrs. Wilson and their daughter, Cynthia, yesterday for one of his brief holidays from his office. Mrs. John Stuart will return tomorrow to Hubbard Woods from a short stay at her Charlevoix place.

A young lady who is being entertained while she is visiting at Lake Geneva is Miss Mary Chatillon of Syracuse, who used to live in Chicago when she was a child and who went to the Latin school here. She is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. T. J. Lefens, with whom she lived in Chicago, and her aunt, Miss Katherine Lefens, at their summer place on the lake.

Miss Chatillon is a daugter of Mrs. Ralph F. Chatillon of Syracuse, and her engagement to William Denison Dunning, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Dunning of Syracuse, was announced last month. Miss Chatillon went to Farmington and to Miss Nixo.'s in Florence, and Mr. Dunning is a graduate of St. Paul's and of Yale, class of 1924.

Edward I. Cudahy and his oldest son, William B. Cudahy, are sailing at midnight tonight from New York on the S. S. New York for six weeks of travel abroad. The younger Cudahy

I Like You So Much

BY MAY EDGINTON

SYNOPSIS.

Gold Franklyn calls Dr. Elverton, who has a surgery in a poor district of London, to attend her indolent, dependent, young half brother. The doctor offers to give Barney Pierce, a well to do accident victim, a lift to his destination, and Pierce waits while the doctor makes his call. He catches a glimpse of the pretty creature who summoned the doctor. Both men determine to help the plucky young orphan girl. The doctor is to sail the next week to New York and Havana on a leave, taking the ship doctor's place. Mrs. Doria Hathaway, a widow friend of Pierce's, is to sail on the same boat. She wants a maid-companion for the Atlantic crossing. The doctor sends Gold to see Mrs. Hathaway and she gets the job. Pierce regrets putting Gold under the demoralizing influence of Doria. He decides to sail himself. On the boat Doria meets David Dorrance, who wants to interest Pierce in a business deal. Gold is angered by Pierce's cynicism and distrust of women. Gip Alen, Gold's half brother, slows away on the boat and threatens to disclose his identity unless Gold does as he bids. Pierce, who overhears Gip's threats, unknown to Gold, arranges to get him third class passage on condition he doesn't bother Gold. Dorrance offers Gold a position as his secretary on the Havana trip, which she gladly accepts. Doria invites a good looking youth from steerage to dine with her and give an exhibition tango. The youth is Gip Alen. Barney again takes Gip in hand and arranges to give him a six months' tryout in his Texas lumber camp. Doria invites Gold to lunch with her on their arrival in New York.

INSTALLMENT XXXIV.

ORCHIDS AND ANTICIPATIONS.

Doria had a handsome small suite booked at the Vanderbilt. "And she took back her offer of the fare home because she was broke!" Gold considered again, looking round it. Doria read her look: "Well, dear," she said as usual, "I must be comfortable. I want what I want when I want it. If any one goes out into the rain it isn't me!" She came over and kissed Gold on the cheek, and the girl had to laugh.

"It's a wonderful philosophy, yours!"

"Common as dirt. But, as I've told you before, the only one for a woman."

Doria powdered her face, retracted the line of her red lips. "We'll lunch in the restaurant, and then you can go on wherever you're going, as I said. I owe you two guineas, don't I? Have you any money besides?"

There was the fifty dollar note Dorrance had, as promised, lent her to land with; and had sent down in an envelope to her cabin. They were to consider it an advance from her future salary. So, as it was not earned yet, she could reply with truth: "No."

"Nine dollars. There: I've changed all my English money. Nine dollars is near enough?"

"No!" Gold replied again, unexpectedly.

"Cute child! There! Let's lunch."

They went down to the restaurant, where, already, Doria sighted people she knew—a man here and there who rose and bowed. She sparkled at this; it was happy augury. Nevertheless she was very distrait during luncheon, thinking, in her shrewd mind that was yet not shrewd enough, about Barney.

She knew perfectly well that, if he would only love her, she would throw over the Havana trip—along with other squandered forgotten money—to stay here in New York near him.

And yet, as this idea, which had been ever present for the last week, revolved in her head, she suffered a strong new reluctance to abandon the Havana trip. She could hear Elverton saying: "We shall soon be fellow voyagers again."

She turned to Gold, asking:

"Why don't you marry that doctor?" continuing with a strange passion: "He's a queer man; he's a dreamer. I thought at first he was weak; all poor men seem to me to be weak. But I think now he's very strong. Yes, he's a strong man. Only he's . . . different."

"Different?"

"From other strong men I've known. Men who made the world darn well pay what they considered it owed them." She broke a minute later from frank enjoyment of her lobster à la Newburg, to exclaim sentimentally: "I wish I knew what became of that divine boy I danced with. A little brute he turned out to be, from all the captain said; but, just the same, divine."

Gold Franklyn nearly cried out: "I wish I might know, too. He's my little brother and my heart aches for him." But she had learned and still exercised the prudence that Doria, obliged no doubt to use in early life, had certainly now cast away.

She made no more than a murmur of response.

Soon one of Doria's acquaintances left his table and came threading his way through the lunchers. He had not reached them when she turned, from a fit of abstraction from which his approach had roused her, to Gold: "If you've finished lunch, dear, do go. Don't bother about me. You'll want to settle yourself in, wherever it is. Good-by and good luck. I'll always have such sweet memories of you, dear."

"I wish I could take life like that," the girl thought, as she walked out of the restaurant. She changed a dollar bill at the desk, tipped the porter who carried out her bag a quarter; and drove into the unknown. This mighty city, rearing its head high into the spring sunlight; these tall, straight lines against the blue sky; these straight planned streets, revealing themselves to her as the taxicab proceeded in its series of short rushes, a little frightened her with their direct and blazoned purposefulness. No easy muddle, no quiet byways, no loitering, no hesitations at all in this city! But as she proceeded downtown, the stress eased; the quieter magic of Washington Square suggested resting place. The taxicab turned through the square, into an almost noiseless street, and drew up before what Dorrance had called a little hotel.

It did not seem small to Gold Franklyn, but soon she was to know that its proportions were modest, homely, compared with the tremendous hotels of New York.

The desk clerk had a room and bath booked. That surprised her. It was Dorrance's doing, of course, and her heart warmed thankfully towards him. Up in the room a box of yellow orchids lay on the chest of drawers. Dorrance again? Again, of course! No one else knew here whereabouts. But, as she opened the box and discovered his expected card within, she had a heartache; not for Gip. It was a heartache caused by other flowers she had seen five days ago; not even intended for her; Doria's flowers; sheaves of roses sent by Barney Pierce. She could hear Doria's cry of gratified pleasure. Then, later, in the sharp, sweet spring dusk that tasted salt over the sea, something for herself: "I like you so much."

"I like you so much." That had not been said to Doria.

She read the scribble on Dorrance's card:

"I don't treat all my secretaries this way; but put these yellow orchids on that stunning red outfit of yours, and I'll fetch you out at seven sharp tonight.

It was good of him. Good. He was a kind man. A kind man and an onlooker. Why should a girl perpetually think of Dorrance, if she thought of him at all, as an onlooker? Even that ardently experimental kiss of his, for which she had slapped his face, had barely registered a memory.

"I like you so much." . . . Why remember that so sharply, and not Dorrance's kiss; Dorrance's good humored approaches; Dorrance's fifty dollars?

Very promptly at seven o'clock her telephone rang and the desk clerk informed her, "Mr. Dorrance waiting." There he was, in the lobby, big and bland, his blue eyes sharpening and brightening as the beauty in scarlet emerged from the lift. On her shoulder, touching the heavy waves of yellow hair that curved to her neck, were the yellow orchids.

"Well!" he said cheerily.

"You booked my room for me. Thank you."

"It's safer; and nicer; makes you feel expected when you get into a strange place," he said, "doesn't it?"

"It was lovely of you. And the flowers——"

"The flowers are as much for me as for you. I'm taking you out! Now. I'm going to take you to the Ritz-Carlton to dine; and then we'll go on at our leisure and dance and have supper in Harlem—that's the colored part, you know. That'll be an experience for you."

"You're guide. I know nothing."

"I know nothing," lingered in Dorrance's ears as they sat side by side in the taxicab. After a thoughtful minute he turned to her: "Even the debs go out to Harlem, little devils! Besides, I'm all for experience. Do you good to learn what is and what isn't."

"I'll learn," she promised rather recklessly.

"You make a stunning looking secretary, you know," he said after another pause, secretly wondering a little as to what brought the reckless note to her voice, and putting it down to orchids and anticipations.

Will Rogers and Fox Sign New Contract

Actor Rejects Proposal of Rival Studio.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 3.—Will Rogers, who was brought to the talking screen and starred for more than $1,000,000 in salary in recent years, has refused the offer of a rival producer and signed a new contract with Fox. The contract is for four films, and "Juibilo," which has been under preparation for a month, will be the first assignment. His second will be "State Fair," and the Fox company will use every one of its headliners for a part in "State Fair."

The offer which Rogers rejected was for a trip around the world filming half a dozen travelogue comedy adventure shorts featuring the Pike Peters family, whom Will brought to the celluloid in "They Had to See Paris" and "Down to Earth."

The damage suit against Paul Whiteman by Robert Kerr, his former Los Angeles landlord, accusing Paul of ruining portions of the premises by installing a miniature bar and spilling alcohol on furniture and rugs, has been removed from the court calendar by the joint request of attorneys for both parties.

Irene Dunne and her husband, Dr. Griffin, arrived from Hawaii today in order to take in the premiere of her "Back Street," which tomorrow night reopens the formerly celebrated Carthay Circle movie theater, which has been dark for a year.

Mitzi Green gets back Saturday after months of personal appearances in movie theaters, and she is due to appear at Radio-RKO theater in make-up for the start of "Little Orphan Annie" next week.

Jackie Cooper has been cast to appear with Joan Crawford in "Lost," which Mrs. Douglas Junior will make for M. G. M. as soon as she gets back from Europe.

A visitor to the M. G. M. lot, where Jackie Cooper is winding up "Father and Son," asked Jackie about his studies, with, "What do you know about arithmetic?" "I know enough," Jackie replied, "to leave it alone."

Jean Hersholt, patron of the Danish Olympic games team, accepted the invitation of the Danish Olympic bicyclists to go with them on their bike practice spin one day before the start of the Olympic cycle events. Too late he learned that the bike riders intended to take a spin of twenty-five miles over Los Angeles boulevards. But Jean was game and accompanied them as he agreed—in his automobile.

Radio-RKO has bought the rights to "The Monkey's Paw" and is adding it to its list of mystery thrillers for release this season, with Wesley Ruggles directing and Bram Fletcher and Louise Carter heading the cast.

The life story of the late Harris Reichenbach, press agent extraordinary, which is being screened at Radio studio under the title "Phantom Fame," has Lee Tracy and Lupe Velez as joint principals, with John Cromwell directing.

Wieman Asks 'Easy' Changes for Religions

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Pastors from all parts of the country are attending sessions of the pastors' summer institute at the University of Chicago this week. They have been discussing a philosophy of religion that breaks with generally accepted forms of Christian thinking.

An exponent of that philosophy which holds that beliefs should be subject to amendment or correction is Prof. Henry Nelson Wieman. He has delivered two of a series of five lectures to the institute which is being conducted jointly by the divinity school of the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary.

Prof. Wieman pleaded with the pastors to apply the scientific method in the approach to God, a method, which he says, bases belief on the experience of cooperation with the creative work of God rather than to try to find an experience which results from a belief.

"Beliefs," said Prof. Weiman, "should constantly be held subject to correction. We must not hold a belief for the desired effect upon ourselves—for a subjective effect. Belief used for that purpose opens the doors of false havens."

Prof. Wieman declared the founder of Christianity had His fiercest combat with a religion that grew out of belief rather than from experience. He asserted that when men feel that they are approaching defeat they seek refuge in some sort of a belief. But, Prof. Wieman declared, such refuges are not real and people only fool themselves as they enter them.

"The purpose of belief is to record our findings for ourselves," said Prof. Wieman.

Prof. Wieman told the assembled pastors that suffering must not be treated as a basic evil. Suffering, he explained, is the sign of God and that the good is battling the bad. Prof. Wieman illustrated this by pointing to physical illness in which suffering for the patient is caused by the conflict of the forces of health with the forces of disease. When, on the deathbed, suffering ceases the conquest waged by the forces of health have lost to the forces of disease.

Prof. Wieman bases his philosophy of religion on the basis that God is in search for man and that man should discover how God can find him rather than the idea that man must search for God. In order to have this accomplished, Prof. Wieman pointed out several steps which he outlined as follows:

"Maintain sensitiveness to the creative process at any cost and find a cause to serve that will tie you up in a significant association with others.

"Hold every belief subject to correction and practice sharing, not only bread but experience."

Church Mural Depicts Jesus Without Beard

New York, Aug. 3.—(AP)—A mural painting depicting a beardless Jesus of Nazareth in modern Cape Cod fisherman garb, preaching to a multitude made up of residents of the fishing village of Chatham, Mass., will be unveiled Saturday in the old Congregational church of that town. The painting, in three panels measuring 9x20 feet over all and intended to hang in the vestibule of the church, is the work of Alice Stallknecht. Jesus, rarely depicted in modern setting and probably never before in modern dress, is seen in the stern of a fisherman's boat.

WEDDING

The marriage of Miss Helen Donker, daughter of Mrs. William Donker of Oak Park, to Philip Arthur Van Vlack Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Van Vlack of Oak Park, will take place on Saturday at 4:30 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother. The couple will leave after the ceremony for a six weeks' trip in the Canadian Rockies and California. Miss Donker attended the Ward Belmont school in Nashville, Tenn., and Mlle. Clement's in Paris. Mr. Van Vlack attended the Chicago Latin, the Tome school at Port Deposit, Md., and Babson institute at Babson, Mass.

Wise to Group the Gifted in Special Class

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

We had space yesterday to take up and answer only one of the objections that are made to placing gifted children in special classes.

Here is another objection that some people voice to special classes for these children: That it is not wise to segregate children; that if they have to live in a world with all kinds of people, they should be educated with all kinds. Also, that in ordinary classes the children learn from each other, the average from the gifted, the defective from the average. At first glance this seems logical, but it is not a contention that holds water.

The report of the White House conference committee on education answers it in this way: "This argument would logically do away with the graded school [which we certainly prefer to the ungraded school]. There is no more reason for having children who can do fourth, fifth, and sixth grade work in a third grade class than there would be in having those same regular grades all in one room.

"Also, two or three exceptionally bright children in a room are not 'pacemakers,' as some maintain, but are really 'discouragers.' The less able children quickly discover that it is no use for them to try to compete with the brighter children."

Many requests have been coming in for booklets and personal replies without the accompanying stamped, self-addressed envelope. Please do not omit this. Also, if you ask for many booklets, additional postage is necessary.

Mainbocher's Guimpe Evening Frock Immediate Success with Super-Chic

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Mainbocher's guimpe evening frock has blazed across the world of fashions, from Paris to Peking and back again the other way, since it was recently shown.

The idea of a simple, low necked evening frock, with a white lingerie guimpe to make it informal, is so practical and dainty that every woman who sees it wants one. It is, also, so wearable that it will continue to be in fashion even with its tremendous popularity, something that rarely happens to overfamous fashions.

The Mainbocher original model is shown today, the one that created the big sensation. It is just a simple black crêpe de chine evening frock with a floor length skirt that fits around the hips and begins to widen just below, falling in folds that betray its circular cut. A panel, shaped like an elongated T, begins on the hips and descends down from the center back to the floor. Ties of black crêpe de chine mark the waistline and the bodice is straight, with a U décollete in back and a V in front. Under this goes a guimpe of white cross barred muslin with little puff sleeves and three white muslin roses at the neckline in front.

Frocks like this, in the wardrobes of smart Parisiennes are equipped with three or four guimpes and their owners wear them incessantly.

New Fillings for Sandwiches Given Today

Don't Be Sparing with Use, Says Expert.

BY MARY MEADE.

Picnic appetites were born big—and sandwiches were created to fill them. So remarked some intuitive soul—and I agreed. For never before have I seen so many clubs, divisions, churches, families, and twosomes bound for picnic grounds as I have this summer. And a gimlet eye with powers of penetration would most certainly discover in their hampers, baskets, and boxes neat stacks of mysterious looking sandwiches disporting every kind of bread and every type of spread.

When the earl of Sandwich slapped a chunk of meat between two slabs of bread and galloped off to the hunt he started something. But it has taken the agile imagination of the picnicking modern to turn sandwich conjuring into a high art.

Before we indulge in thought of luscious fillings and tasty breads to hide them, however, a few secrets of successful sandwich making must out. First, whatever the filling, use plenty of it, and spread to the edges. Use bread that is twenty-four hours old. It cuts better and is easier on our interior mechanisms. Don't melt your butter. Warm slightly, and then cream as for cake.

For thin sandwiches, spread the end of the loaf, then cut off the spread slice. It's better to butter each slice, and thus prevent the soaking of the filling. If melted butter is used in the filling, the slices need not be buttered. Lettuce helps to keep the sandwiches moist. Shred it for easy eating.

Avoid sandwiches using fish or onion in packed lunches. The flavors will grow too intimate with other foods. If you take meat, cheese, nut, or egg sandwiches picnicking, plan to toast them on arrival. They'll be delicious.

And now for plans and specifications: First, fruit fillings. Dates make a delightful foundation for a filling. Put the date and nuts through a food chopper and moisten with orange juice, lime juice, or cream. Spread on whole wheat bread. Or chop dates, figs and peanuts together and moisten with melted butter and lemon juice. Date paste blended with honey or with cream cheese; ground dates and finely diced celery moistened with tart salad dressing; all of these are tasty as well as satisfying to the "aching void."

Then the jam cupboard is always a good place to turn to in sandwich orgies. Raspberry or strawberry jam or orange marmelade mixed with cottage cheese—there's a winner! And cream cheese adds just the right accent to finely shredded pineapple, either fresh or canned. Peanut butter blended with a tart plum pulp or with cherry preserves loves to go on picnics, and all kinds of dried fruits may be ground or cooked to a paste and blended with cream and tart fruit juices for a delectable spread.

Cheese sandwiches — good, husky ones as well as their dainty cousins—may be served as the picnic entrée when steak fries and wieners aren't in order. A snappy, zestful combination grows out of your own blending of minced ham, grated American cheese and finely chopped sweet pickles. Moisten with mayonnaise and spread generously between buttered slices.

Or try tomato paste blended with some peppy cheese and glorified by finely chopped pecans and just a trace of onion juice. Or equal parts of cottage cheese, chopped pimiento, and green olives. Or cream cheese combined with chopped crisped bacon, chopped parsley, and a sprinkling of onion salt.

All kinds of meat sandwiches suggest themselves. Veal, beef, chicken, or pork, ground or sliced thin, and moistened with mayonnaise or catsup—make luscious eating. Heart, liver, and tongue are other favorites. Mustard and horseradish or chopped pickles will give pep to the right combinations. Crisp vegetables blended with meat give the desired chewy quality and save sandwiches from becoming monotonous. Raw carrots, celery, lettuce, cabbage fill the bill.

HAY FEVER MISERY relieved by disposable tissues

Instead of irritating handkerchiefs . . . use KLEENEX disposable tissues

Kleenex puts an end to discomfort caused by damp, irritating handkerchiefs. Puts an end to big laundry bills, too—and to disagreeable washing.

Kleenex is a soft tissue, now used regularly for handkerchiefs. It's the size of a handkerchief, gentle, absorbent, snowy white, or tinted, if you prefer.

Softest . . . yet Strongest

Try the large size Kleenex, too—tissues three times usual size. It's ideal for guest towels and general household use.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

How's the silhouette surviving the bathing suit test?

Or, are you one of the girls who paraded once? Then decide if you look like that big, fat, Polynesian-tinted blonde over there, no more beach exhibitions for you?

Well, there's another summer coming! And there's a fall suit to be reckoned with, in the meantime. And there's still some of the summer and the bathing suit season left yet. So, why give up and go home and eat a second helping of ice cream just for spite?

Honestly, this business of taking off excess pounds isn't bad, at all. You just think it's going to be. When you get started you'll be surprised how easily you can adjust yourself to it! One thing sure, you do not like your present state of being—too much. [Being too much, I mean.]

If you didn't like the way the living room furniture was arranged, you'd shuffle it around, wouldn't you? You don't just sit down and say that it can't be helped. You don't do that even with the reduced income. You meet the difficulty half way. You don't flop and cry you're sunk. Some one has to help you.

Why don't you look at the overstuffed figure that way? Say, it's a visitation sent to test your character. It's a condition you don't have to stand for. It's a crisis that has to be faced [by you and a lot of other people who see you]. So, why not give the fat the works?

I just don't understand how women can keep on talking about their fat and moaning and groaning about it and still do nothing about it. Heaven only knows, it isn't because there isn't all kind of advice to be had for the asking. They know what to do, themselves, generally. But they don't move until they get a terrible wallop from somebody.

The best way to beat the game is to wade in when there are only a few pounds extra.

BRITISH DICKER WITH AUSTRALIA PERILS U. S. TRADE

Pact May Cost America $50,000,000 a Year.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 3.—Great Britain and Australia got down to hard bargaining today at the imperial conference and thus confirmed the impression that it is only between these two units of the British empire that any real bargain can be struck.

Australia wants from Britain a guarantee for her great refunding loan which will enable her to reduce the interest on her two and half billion dollar debt from five to three and a half per cent. In return Australia is willing to give Britain a practical monopoly of her market for manufactured goods.

Lay Cards on Table.

The two delegations met all day today. The meeting was adjourned this evening after what was described as a "thoroughly satisfactory interchange of views." Britain and Australia laid their cards on the table and many obscure points were elucidated. The experts on each side will now study the proposals and fit them into a coördinated scheme which it is hoped will be ready in a day or two.

It is understood that under the suggested British-Australian agreement, Australia would receive financial backing for her refunding loan and would receive preference on meat, wheat, wine, and fruit, but recognizes Britain's difficulties in taxing food. If Britain finally decides in favor of food taxation, Australia will get most favored nation treatment.

In return, Britain asks for free entry or reduced tariffs on almost all her manufactured goods, and as Australia's manufacturing is still in the elementary stage, it will probably be possible to grant this.

Would Hit U. S. Hard.

Such a preference might affect annually about $50,000,000 of United States trade. The figures for the fiscal year ended June, 1930, the last available, show that Australia took $121,038,000 worth of goods from America, while America took from Australia only $20,058,000.

The principal items in America's exports were machinery, $24,000,000; motor fuel, $20,000,000; lumber and wood products, $11,000,000; automobiles, $10,000,000; leaf tobacco, $8,500,000; textiles, $5,000,000; lubricating oil, $5,000,000, and drugs, chemicals, and fertilizers, $5,000,000.

Great Britain, of course, could not supply the motor fuel, lubricating oil, tobacco, and lumber, but she could supply all the rest, amounting to about $53,000,000.

Other Separate Parleys Open.

Great Britain this evening began a series of conversations similar to those with Australia with India, and New Zealand and South Africa are dated up, but there is no indication when Canada will be ready to show her hand.

All pretense of friendly coöperation between the British and Canadians has now been dropped and dispatches received here from England today indicate that all the British newspapers have opened a furious attack on Premier Bennett. The Liberal News Chronicle of London, which is usually moderate, calls him "the buffoon of Ottawa."

Bitter Canadian resentment was evidenced tonight. The Canadian reply to British charges accusing the Canadians of "irritating delay" in the submission of their proposals is that the Canadian set of proposals had to be overhauled in the light of Stanley Baldwin's original British submission to the conference, and the United Kingdom's privately disclosed difficulties in respect of her trade with Russia.

The Canadians, for the first time since the conference opened, accuse the United Kingdom of playing "leather vested poker." Despite the British demand for Canada's proposals' it was ascertained tonight that Canada's attitude is: "Who knows what the United Kingdom proposals are? The United Kingdom has been simply sitting back, wanting everybody else to put their cards on the table and then she will play, and not before."

Canada, it is learned, nearly issued a warm statement like that of South Africa in response to Baldwin's recent document portraying preponderate United Kingdom favors to the dominions. Canada, according to the warm comment of Canadians here, has been giving the United Kingdom trade preferences for 34 years, while the United Kingdom's trade preferences to Canada are but six months old.

FLOOD DISASTER HITS MANCHURIA; HARVESTS RUINED

HARBIN, Manchuria, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Twenty-one days of uninterrupted rain has converted north central Manchuria into a vast lake and brought about a national disaster. Considerable loss of human life and live stock has been reported from many districts.

Tens of thousands of square miles of rich harvests have been destroyed and enormous stocks of grain and soy beans lost. Thousands of farmers and other residents have lost their homes and are flocking to the cities.

The material damage is estimated at several hundred million Mexican dolars [a Mexican dollar is worth approximately 21 cents], and the floods threaten to rival those of 1914, the worst in Manchuria's history.

Harbin is isolated from the rest of the world by rail and mail. All three branches of the Chinese Eastern railway are paralyzed. It is possible to travel by boat from Harbin to Tsitsihar, a distance of 200 miles, over a route much of which once was land.

Bandits Hold Up Loan Association; Take $836

Four armed bandits held up a meeting of the Security Loan association at 1024 Noble street last night and took $836 from Mrs. Mary Wisniewski, 2446 North Luna avenue, the secretary. The money represented dues collected from a half dozen members, who witnessed the holdup.

FARM BOARD IN PERIL OF HAVING TO CLOSE SHOP

Either That or It Must Curtail Force.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—Controller General J. R. McCarl's ban on additional payless furloughs for government employés until the twenty-four day leave ordered by congress has been used up may drastically curtail, if not close down, the federal farm board, it was disclosed today.

Unless the controller general backs down the board faced the alternative of dismissing outright about 40 per cent of its force or shutting up shop after Dec. 31 unless congress appropriates more money to enable it to resume business. In view of congress' hostility to the 500 million dollar farm agency, help from that source was considered less likely than a back down by the controller general.

Appropriation Cut.

Congress slashed the board's appropriation for the current year from $1,000,000 to mere authorization to use $800,000 of its unexpended balance. Only administration intervention saved this from being dropped to $500,000.

With a hostile congress threatening to close it up entirely at the end of the present year, the board now faces imminent closure by the controller general's interpretation of the 160 million dollar so-called economy bill.

The farm board, with other government bureaus whose appropriations had been drastically cut, adopted a plan of forcing its employés to take payless furloughs in addition to the 24 day leave. McCarl ruled that this could not be done until the entire legislative furlough had been used up, also that when administrative furloughs are added the first month's pay must be impounded for return to the treasury.

Forty Per Cent on Leave.

The farm board now has 40 per cent of its force on indefinite leave in the hope of saving $300,000 to keep it going. Under the McCarl ruling the saving made thus far must be impounded and the employés recalled to work or dismissed outright.

Thomas E. Campbell of the civil service commission has asked the controller general to reconsider his decision.

Wife Divorces Brother of Johnny Weissmuller

Mrs. Dorothy Rumble Weissmuller, 23 years old, 4637 North Lawler avenue, got a divorce yesterday before Judge Joseph B. David in the Superior court from Peter J. Weissmuller, a brother of Johnny Weissmuller, swimmer, and movie actor. She charged desertion. They were married in 1926 following an elopement to Crown Point, and have a son, Thomas, 3 years old. Mrs. Weissmuller sought to waive alimony, but Judge David refused to sign the decree unless she reserved the right to ask it at a later date. Her husband, who is in California with his brother, did not contest the action.

WOMAN'S SUICIDE IN LAKE BLAMED ON MARKET LOSS

The body of a woman who committed suicide by leaping into the lake at 53d street was identified yesterday as that of Miss Elizabeth B. Orr, 68 years old, owner of an apartment building at 6309 Harper avenue.

A note was found in Miss Orr's apartment saying that she was "going to the lake to end it," H. R. McCoy, who lived in her apartment house, told police that Miss Orr had been brooding over financial losses. Miss Orr, who had taught school for 30 years in Coldwater, Mich., invested her savings in stocks at the time of her retirement 11 years ago, McCoy said.

Robert Burke, 815 East 63d street, testified at the inquest, which resulted in a verdict of suicide. He told of seeing Miss Orr cross the outer drive at 53d street early yesterday and plunge into 14 feet of water. He called coast guards.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Aug. 3.—The government again displayed its unfriendly attitude toward Gov. Gen. James McNeill at the Dublin horse show. The Free State anthem was not played by the army band, as is customary, but by a civilian band hired from England for the show.

Frank Aiken, minister of defense, warned the army band not to play the anthem when the governor general arrived. Mr. Bohane, director of the show, hearing of this, arranged for the army band to be absent. Instead St. Hilda's band was in position opposite the vice regal stand and played the anthem as McNeill entered.

The crowd generally uncovered heads and few persons were aware of the snub intended for King George's representative.

GRIMM NAMES WOODY ENGLISH CUBS' CAPTAIN

Veeck Tells 'Why' of Hornsby Ouster.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 3.—Appointment of Woody English to succeed Charley Grimm as captain of the Chicago Cubs was announced today by the new Cub manager following a player meeting called when the opening game of the series between the Phillies and the Cubs was rained out.

The captaincy of the Cubs, even under a playing manager, is a detail job and is not a hollow honor. The place carries extra remuneration.

"There is positively nothing to it," Veeck said. "The only reason Hornsby was discharged as manager is because we disagreed over his handling of the team."

The rain which prevented the playing of the opener was a personal break for the new Chicago manager. Had the game been played Charley would have had to participate without getting any sleep during the night.

Congratulations Pour In.

As soon as news of Grimm's appointment was made known in Chicago and had spread to other cities, the flow of telegrams and long distance telephone calls started and continued till 3 o'clock, when Grimm called on the hotel management to head off the congratulatory riot.

Grimm had not been saved, however. His roommate on this trip has been Riggs Stephenson and just as Grimm had dozed off Stevie was seized with a nightmare. He woke Charley, who couldn't get back to sleep. Let Charley tell about it:

"Stevie, who usually goes to sleep at 9 o'clock, had stayed up to help me with the telegrams and telephone calls until after midnight. Finally he said, 'Your first job as manager can be to assign yourself a new roommate. I can't stand it.'

"Pull 'em Out!" Yells Stevie.

"So Stevie went to sleep and in a couple of hours I followed him. I had just fallen into slumber when I heard Stevie shouting. He was standing up in bed, tugging at the bed clothes and yelling orders.

"It developed that Stevie was dreaming that all of his relatives had fallen into an open well down in Alabama and that he was trying to pull them out on the bucket rope.

"Stevie's distress in his big life saving number so startled me that I never got back to sleep."

Just Bubbling Over.

Despite his grogginess from lack of sleep, Grimm's spirits were those of a kid on Christmas morning. An exuberant, happy type, Charley, tired as he was, couldn't keep from bubbling over. If his heart was full of joy, that of his wife must have matched it. He told of his last night's talk to Mrs. Grimm, at the Grimm home in Normandy, St. Louis county, Mo.:

"As soon as I got the great news I called my house and the maid said that Mrs. Grimm and our daughter, Mae Jean, hadn't returned from inspecting a pony we just bought for the youngster.

"But Mrs. Grimm called back after a while. I said, 'Kiddin, if you're standing at the phone, sit down before I tell you the news.' Then I told her she was talking to the manager of the Cubs.

"I heard a thump, like the receiver dropping out of her hand. Then she asked me to call her again tonight and tell all about it; she was that excited she couldn't listen to details last night."

Wrigley Puts O. K. on Grimm as Cubs' Pilot

Phil K. Wrigley, who inherited the holdings of his father, William Wrigley, Jr., in the Chicago Cubs, is quite satisfied with the appointment by William L. Veeck, president of the club, of Charley Grimm to succeed Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Cubs.

"Veeck is running the ball club," Wrigley said yesterday. "Anything Veeck does is all right with me. I dont' know much about baseball. It's Veeck's job to see that the Cubs win a pennant.

"I rather suspected that Veeck was dissatisfied with the way things were going and that he had planned some change. But I didn't know until I was told about it Tuesday night that it had been effected."

Commenting on Grimm's appointment, Wrigley said:

"There is no question about Grimm being a capable ball player and potentially a good manager. Certainly Veeck must have had some good reasons for appointing him. My object is a pennant for Chicago. That was my father's greatest wish and it also is mine."

Wrigley appeared to take the view that the Cubs, now battling in second place, would win the pennant with the switch in management.

JOE OUGHT TO KNOW HOW IT FEELS

Joe McCarthy reads news of dismissal of Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Cubs and probably is thinking about the time the same thing happened to him in 1930. Joe is in Chicago as boss of the New York Yankees, American league leaders. He had some kind words to say for Charley Grimm, new Cubs' manager, who used to play under McCarthy's direction. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

THE man designated by the late William Wrigley as "the smartest manager and the smartest player I have ever seen" has been ruled incompetent to lead the Chicago Cubs. The abruptness of his dismissal was as surprising as his appointment.

Joe McCarthy, who brought the Cubs from last place to a league championship, was let out because he failed to keep the club in front. At least that was the explanation advanced. Similarly, Hornsby has been deposed in favor of Charlie Grimm because the Cubs are not as high in the race as President William Veeck thinks they should be.

There probably were deeper reasons for both changes. It is unlikely that the owners of the club measure a manager's worth entirely by the standing of the team. Circumstances outside a manager's control frequently preclude championships.

It is encouraging, however, to find magnates who are so determined to have a winner that they are not afraid to make drastic moves.

Let us hope the Cubs under Charlie Grimm will be so changed the fans will not know them when they return to Wrigley field. They have been pretty hard to recognize, at that, on the present invasion of the east.

While we are reluctant to make a national issue of the matter, results of the Olympic games to date must be a shock to natives of the Pacific coast. Where are those young speed demons who were burning up the track in spring meets?

The far west, with its Charlie Paddock and Frank Wykoff, has more or less monopolized sprinting honors in recent years. But the 100 meter race in the 1932 Olympics demonstrated that geography has little to do with development of champion athletes. Without a high powered chamber of commerce to publicize their speed, two men from Chicagoland, Eddie Tolan of Michigan, and Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette ran first and second in the greatest test the sport presents. And to add to California's embarrassment another mid-westerner, George Simpson of Ohio State, placed fourth. These three also showed the way at 200 meters.

The shot put was won by Leo Sexton of the New York A. C., but the Big Ten territory scored again when Eddie Gordon of Iowa captured the broad jump.

The coast may get some consolation out of the victory of McNaughton of California in the high jump. But he is a native of Canada.

John (Bud) Clancy, who bobbed in and out of the White Sox lineup for several years, has crashed into the National league with a loud beating of cymbals. Clancy made his debut as first basemen with the Brooklyn Dodgers in the double header against the Cubs Sunday and in each game got three hits out of four trips to the plate. He repeated in Tuesday's encounter.

Clancy went to Brooklyn in an exchange that sent Long George Kelly to Jersey City.

His south side friends will hope that Clancy's showing against the Cubs is not merely one of those early season attacks to which he used to be addicted.

Boys Sentenced for Theft of Hutchison's Golf Clubs

Jock Hutchison, golf professional at Glen View country club, appeared yesterday in felony court to testify against two youths charged with the theft of golf clubs from his automobile. The defendants, Bruno Bedakas, 18 years old, and Frank Gerame, 19, were found guilty by Judge Leon Edelman. Bedakas was sentenced to 30 days and Gerame 90 days.

Lyons Stills Yankee Bats; Sox Win, 3-2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Just a little outside assistance was all that the redoubtable Ted Lyons needed yesterday to bring about a temporary halt in the Yankees' mad dash toward a pennant. Ted did his share by restricting Joe McCarthy's maulers to six hits in ten innings and by supplying a double to bring about a deadlock in the eighth. Then a few of his mates, particularly Lu Blue, took the matter in hand in the tenth and shoved across the run that boosted the red striped White Sox to their second victory over the pacemakers in eleven starts. The score was 3 to 2.

Blue's majestic thump that spilled the Yankee hopes was a double shot down the right field line to open what proved the final attack on Charley Ruffing. The orthodox sacrifice bunt provided by Grube nudged Blue to third. All sorts of strategy then prevailed. Billy Sullivan swung for Lyons, but was purposely passed. Sam Jones ran for him and, just by way of having a share of the managerial authority, McCarthy put Hoag in center field in place of Combs, who doesn't throw so well. The strategy continued with Bob Fothergill swinging for Funk and no more was needed. Round Robert clouted a fly to right. Blue ran home and the show was over.

Ted Gets Good Support.

Lyons, now the owner of six victories against nine trimmings, spent such a profitable afternoon that all his troubles were little ones except in one inning. That was the fourth, when, due to his precaution while facing such home run possibilities as Babe Ruth and Tony Lazzeri, he filled the bases with one out. A single followed to give the Yanks their only runs of the day. The single also marked the visitors' decline on offense. They were guilty of only two safeties in the last six innings and during this time Lyons had to contend with only one blunder by his usually shaky mates.

Sox to Retain Lew Fonseca as Manager in 1933

Lew Fonseca will be retained as manager of the White Sox in 1933, it was announced last night by J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the club.

"We haven't made much headway this year, but I feel that Fonseca, with the new players we have acquired and others we expect to sign, will do better next season," Owner Comiskey said.

Fonseca, who has been a big league player since 1921, except for a season in the International league, came to the White Sox in a trade with the Cleveland Indians for Willie Kamm May 17, 1931. He was appointed manager last fall, succeeding Donie Bush. Fonseca is now on a scouting trip in the American association.

CHOCOLATE RISKS BELT TONIGHT IN BOUT WITH SHEA

Tonight's Card

Sammy Slaughter vs. Paul Pironne, 8.
Jack Moran vs. Marty Sampson, 6.

The National Boxing association is going to give Kid Chocolate a gold belt tonight to match his world's junior lightweight championship. And then Gen. John V. Clinnin, who'll present the trophy bought by the Stadium, and the customers, will sit back at ease to see if Eddie Shea can grab the Kid's shiny piece of plate.

The gold belt, concrete evidence of a mythical honor, all done up in colors and costing a couple hundred of dollars, revives the old days when fighters fought for diamond belts, brashly valued for publicity at $10,000. But even in that glorified era, the boys had their side bet so that the winner might gaze upon his evidence of his prowess without distraction emanating from worry about where he'd find his next plate of beans. The loser merited no consideration.

Gets His Pay Win or Lose.

But tonight the Kid will accept his gold plate, make his bow, and then face Chicago's Eddie Shea, knowing that win or lose he'll receive 40 per cent of the net receipts. Chocolate and Luis Guiterrez, his manager, will profit in direct relationship to the number of townsmen who attend the N. B. A. proceedings, and, of course, the ensuing 10 round defense of the 130 pound title. Even Eddie Shea, who is the unanimous choice to take a licking, will not be left out. Eddie will draw 10 per cent of the net.

No advance prediction has been offered but if Chocolate and the contender parade before 10,000 tonight, all will be most agreeably surprised.

The net receipts for tonight's show, on the basis of a complete sellout, will be $48,000. Thus Chocolate theoretically will earn $19,200. Actually he'll take less than ten grand, and Shea, who's down for another theoretical $4,800, will get enough coin to pay his training expenses, seconds, buy a new bathrobe and perhaps a pair of shoes. What Shea wants, of course, is the junior lightweight title and Chocolate's jewelry.

Uncle Sam Gets His Cut.

The federal tax on boxing admissions will give the Stadium corporation and its employés its first wallop. Before the recent national tax, the Stadium kept its prices under the limit of $4.99 and thus paid only 10 per cent on this priced ticket to Uncle Sam. Now the federal 10 per cent is levied on all admissions, as is the Illinois tax. Consequently on a $1.10 ticket the Stadium now will receive 90 cents where last spring its collected a dollar.

As far as tonight's fight is concerned, the consensus seems to be that Shea's chance of victory rests on the effectiveness of his attack to Chocolate's body. The Kid has several ideas of his own, which principally are concerned with eluding Shea in close and hitting oftener. Chocolate is younger, taller and faster, if such generalities means anything. Shea can take it, they say, and a long list of opponents his discovered he has a punch.

Slaughter Meets Pironne.

The supporting card may take the play from the championship fight. Sammy Slaughter, Bud Taylor's middleweight, and Paul Pironne, a newcomer from Cleveland, apparently are well matched for their eight round encounter. Angel Civille, more or less regarded as Porto Rico's wild man, has Willie Oster of Boston for an opponent. Hymie Wiseman and Freddie Miller, bantamweights, complete the series of eight rounders.

The first bout, scheduled at 8:15, brings together Jack Moran, Chicago middleweight, and Marty Sampson, a New York Swede who has just discovered the lake region. Sampson and Moran have trained at the same gymnasium, Trafton's, and Sampson has been quite impressive. Moran proved himself against Frank Battaglia, so these six rounds loom above the average for openers.

Sculp That Bust! Sculp That Bust!

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 3.—Let it not be thought that the Olympic program ignores the feats of the intellect and the soul, although the customers' cheers are reserved solely for the athletic triumphs performed within the arena. As the pole vaulters were hopping over the bar in the stadium and the patrons were yelling for each new height attained by the athletes, there came a lull in the running story which is maintained in jerked English on the stock tickers in the press coop.

During this lull, the publicity department found an opportunity to slip in a list of awards in the fine arts division which was to most of the assembled journalists the first intimation that the Olympic program took any notice of any feats save those of muscle and bone.

Among the winners in the fine arts division was Mahonri Young, who scored a first place for the United States with a statue of an incident in a prize fight. The name of Mr. Young was familiar because he was the author of the figure of a prize fighter which adorns the Muldoon-Tunney tombstone, the emblem of the heavyweight championship of the world, in the lobby of Madison Square Garden.

The model for the figure surmounting the Muldoon-Tunney tombstone was Ernie Schaaf, the becalmed mariner, once of the United States navy. He started out to reach the heavyweight championship a few years ago, but steered into the Sargossa of prize fight politics and is not going anywhere any more.

The tombstone is a grave problem now because it is a very durable monument made of granite and bronze and its existence almost demands that as long as it lasts there must be a heavyweight championship and heavyweight champions.

The competitors in the fine arts division here operate under an honor system which it is deemed unwise to apply to the players in the physical department of the games. The athletes must be prepared at all times to prove that they are amateurs and they are under close scrutiny of patrol judges, clerks, referees and other officials wearing badges during every instant of their performances lest they violate some rule.

The authors, architects, sculptors and other contestants in the fine arts would be deeply humiliated to be called amateurs. That would mean that their writings, designs and statues were not good enough to interest any customers. Also in the fine arts, there are no officials wearing badges to watch the author with a suspicious gaze while he writes his novel or poem. He may write it on a typewriter or by hand, according to his preference, or at night, or under the stimulus of black coffee, highballs, applejack or even opium, if that should be his pleasure.

The theory is that this liberality confers no special advantage on any author. They all have the same privilege and, moreover, they do not have to write against the stop watch, but may take all the time they want. Some runners might run better if they did not have to hurry so, but they are not allowed the author's privilege to take plenty of time.

The architects also are deemed to be above question and there is never any inquiry as to whether they borrowed their designs out of the classics, which is a possibility, nevertheless. It is a possibility because Mr. Abe [Singletooth] Yager, the press agent for Humbert Fugazy, once brought around to the newspaper offices in New York a design for an arena which Fugazy was going to build, twice as large as Madison Square Garden, only to admit, under pressure, that this was in fact the original drawing of the Arkansas state capitol in Little Rock. Mr. Yager had borrowed it from a friend in the architecture business.

But, compensating for these privileges and apparent advantages, the fine arts contestants are denied the cheers and publicity that reward the athletes. But if it is true that you cannot attract 50,000 customers to watch an author write a book, it is also true that the presence of some 50,000 witnesses, all yelling, "Come on, Hemingway, finish that paragraph," would be more a trial than an inspiration. It is tactful of the Olympic authorities to realize that the fine arts people have no dishonest motives in preferring to do their work in quiet seclusion. They trust them to roll their own. It is only when athletes and football coaches turn to literature that the ghost begins to walk.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The largest crowd—76,000—that has seen the Olympic games since the colorful opening day ceremony watched American athletes stage a cleanup of points and records in today's program at Los Angeles stadium.

The United States won four events and picked up 70 points, boosting its team total for four days of competition to 151 points, overwhelming all other nations.

George Saling, Percy Beard, and Jack Keller started it by finishing one, two and three in the final of the 110 meter high hurdles, in which the tall Iowa athlete equaled the existing Olympic record of :14 6-10. D. Finlay and Lord David George Burghley, both of Great Britain, took fourth and fifth places. Welscher of Germany was disqualified for knocking over four hurdles.

Beard, the lanky Alabama boy, appeared to have the hurdles race won as he romped into a clear lead, only to stumble over the next to the last barrier. As this mishap occurred Saling forged quickly in front and broke the tape with a lead of four feet. Keller, who started slowly, was a close third.

Tolan Takes Dash.

Next came Eddie Tolan, George Simpson, and Ralph Metcalfe, sweeping all three leading positions in the 200 meter finals for another American accumulation of 19 points. Tolan's time, :21.2, further reduced the Olympic record, which had been smashed five times in the qualifying heats of the last two days. Tolan's time was announced as the fastest 200 meters ever run around a turn.

The unofficial world's record for a straightaway is held by Metcalfe at :20.5. Metcalfe, the Chicago colored boy, got off to his slowest start in the finals today, but sped in a pace ahead of Jonath, flying German, in fourth place.

Chunky Tolan, with his glasses fastened behind his ears with tape to lessen the last iota of wind resistance, had a bitter fight to stave off the challenge of Simpson, ex-Ohio State star, who chose the Olympic games to make a marvelous comeback after a year out of track competition.

United States Takes Discus Throw.

Tolan's race clipped 1-5 second off the Olympic mark which Jonath and Carlos Luti of Argentina jointly set at :21.4 in yesterday's qualifying competition. Luti finished fifth today and Walters of Argentina sixth.

John F. Anderson, a towering blond from Cornell university, and Henri Jean Laborde, heavy shouldered, black haired San Francisco boy, presented Uncle Sam with his third clean up, placing first and second in the discus throw, in which Anderson extended the games' record to 162 feet 4⅞ inches. Two Frenchmen placed third and fourth.

Bill Miller Wins Vault.

The pole vault furnished another American victory and another Olympic record, with Bill Miller, Stanford university boy, clearing 14 feet 1⅞ inches, after a terrific duel with Shuhei Nishida, a slight little Japanese. Nishida passed out of the competition after clearing 14 feet. Miller later failed in an effort for a world's record with the bar at 14 feet 5 inches.

Two Los Angeles collegians, George Jefferson and Bill Graber, fattened the Yankee point total with third and fourth places, respectively, Jefferson passing the bar at 13 feet 9 inches and Graber at 13 feet 7⅛ inches.

Graber recently set the world vault record at 14 feet 4⅝ inches at the American Olympic qualifying trials, in which Miller, today's winner, cleared 14 feet 1⅝ inches. Nishida had never done better than 13 feet 10 inches be-

PITTSBURGHER WAKES UP AT 5-1 ON HEAVY TRACK

BY FRENCH LANE.

Way back last April Pittsburgher stepped out on a heavy track and won the Clark handicap down at Churchill Downs in Kentucky.

During the next three months he started a dozen times and could never drop his nose down in front. He was close, but he couldn't win. So his backers quit him.

Then came the Pine Gate purse at a mile and a sixteenth at Hawthorne yesterday. The track was heavy, just like it was on the day last spring when Pittsburgher had his last taste of victory.

The Pine Gate was a warmup for Saturday's $25,000 Hawthorne handicap, and despite the bad track seven candidates for the rich handicap paraded to the post.

Well, what happened?

Old Pittsburgher took a new lease on life, ran like the Pittsburgher of a couple of seasons ago, and he was in front by six lengths when he came pounding down the home stretch to say "good afternoon" to the judges.

Pays $12.56 to Win.

Pittsburgher had failed too many times to muster many backers. Polydorus, Spanish Play, and Evergold had more support. So Pittsburgher paid $12.56 to win, $4.78 to place, and $3.90 to show to the loyal Kentuckians who backed him. Evergold's place price was $4.70 and he was at $8.56 to show. Morsel paid $6.16 to show.

It was the best race Pittsburgher has been able to shake out of his system all season. It was a race that more than likely would win the $25,000 handicap on Saturday. But Pittsburgher will have to find the same kind of a track to do it. And horses that must have a tailor made track brought around for them to run over always seem to be missing when the spoils are passed out after the running of a rich stake event.

Evergold Is Second.

Evergold, the 3 year old from Dick and Pat Nash's stable, was second. Morsel, the little black flyer from the Lemar stock farm stable, was third. And in fourth place came the favorite, Polydorus, his chances for a victory in the handicap Saturday considerably dimmed by the disappointing race he ran.

There was a change in jockeys in Polydorus from Maiben to Willie Elliot, the latter being Phar Lap's old pilot. And just as he was leaving the infield paddock Polydorus took a kick at one of the iron railing pipes on the paddock fence and hit it with some part of his right hind foot or leg. It caused him some pain for an instant, but he didn't seem to be favoring the leg by the time he reached the post.

Wish Polydorus Could Talk!

Whether it was Elliot's ride, which was weird in spots, or that kick at the rail, or the bad track which made Polydorus run such an ordinary race he wasn't able to tell the judges when he came loitering home in fourth position. As efficient as our horse track judges are, they have never been able to converse intelligently with the horses.

Let's go back to old Pittsburgher and the great race that he ran on this particular afternoon. He let Risque make the pace until the field was near the last turn. Then Jockey Wright turned the big fellow loose and he flew toward the front. He soon had Risque subdued and then rolled out into a long lead.

Winning Time 1:48 4-5.

Heading into the stretch he was three lengths in front. A sixteenth out he was five lengths to the good. He passed the finish line leading by six lengths. His time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:48 4-5, not fast to be sure, but the track was heavy and Hawthorne races are timed from a standing start by the electric clock.

Spanish Play was making his first start in some time. His battles with Pittsburgher have been thrilling for three seasons. But the little iron horse of American racing wasn't up to this kind of a contest. He finished next to last in the seven horse field and never was in the contention.

At some stage of the race he was kicked on his hind left leg and blood was flowing from the wound when he was led off the track. Whether the injury is in any way serious the track physicians had not been able to determine last night. But Dick Morris and Pat Knebelkamp, who own him, showed considerable worry.

Prices Up, Crowd Down.

They turned down a big offer for Spanish Play early in the Arlington Park season and since they refused that offer he hasn't been doing so well.

Two dollar admission was charged at Hawthorne yesterday and it is very evident the racegoers of Chicago like those dollar days. The attendance was about 7,500, considerably smaller than on the first two days of the meeting when the price of an admission ticket was only a dollar.

Volette and Workman Win at Saratoga

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 13.—[Special.]—Volette, the daughter of Dis Donc, which set a new track record at Arlington Park, bore the colors of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney to victory in the Schuylerville feature here today and one of the Saratoga association's best known tests for 2 year old fillies. It was the second Whitney score in this stake, which had its first running in 1918. Panasette won in 1930.

Raymond [Sonny] Workman, who piloted Panasette, had the leg up on the winner, which finished a half length before the Wheatley stable's Notebook.

Cutie Face Distant Third.

Eight lengths back of the second horse, Cutie Face crossed the line, with the others as follows: Speed Boat, Welcome Gift, Brown Erne, Crazy Jane, Barn Swallow, Two Tricks, and Glorify.

Because of the rain and sloppy going, there were eight scratches, including Happy Gal, winner of the Flash; and White Lies, considered one of Joseph E. Widener's best fillies. With the field of ten remaining, the value to the winner was $3,350 and Volette set about winning it by a dashing start.

Workman Gets to Work.

Cutie Face, Speed Boat, and Notebook also were away swiftly and Johnny Gilbert immediately took back off the pace with Speed Boat. A few moments later Workman decided it was not the part of wisdom to race with the leaders and he took Volette back. Going around the bend, Notebook had too much speed for Cutie Face. The Wheatley racer for a brief space looked like the winner.

Workman, however, had a good deal left with the daughter of Dis Donc and at the top of the stretch he went to a drive and soon was with the van. In another half furlong he was in front and that ended the race.

Notebook drove gamely through the stretch but she could not hold the pace of the leader, which completed a double for Whitney by winning. It was also a double for Trainer Fred Hopkins and Jockey Workman. Volette was the favorite at 13 to 5 and finished the five and a half furlongs in 1:07 3-5. She had 115 pounds up.

GREEN BAY SIGNS SHELLEY, TEXAS U. BACK FIELD STAR

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The Packers, for three years champions of the National Professional Football league, have signed Dexter Shelley, former University of Texas back field ace, who performed in 1931 with the Providence Steam Rollers. Shelley is an excellent passer.

Announcement that Shelley has signed a Green Bay contract was made today by Coach E. L. [Curley] Lambeau. The half back will report for the Packers' first practice later this month.

Shelley starred as full back and captain of the 1930 Texas team and appeared in the east-west game on the Pacific coast during the Christmas holiday season of that year.

Quick, Watson, the Needle! How Did This Fish Die?

BY BOB BECKER.

Fishermen now have an opportunity to play Sherlock Holmes. As a result of some interesting sleuthing recently recorded in Michigan by Dr. Carl Hubbs, the well known scientist, the cause of the death of a dead fish found floating down stream may be determined. Dr. Hubbs, director of the Institute for Fisheries Research, says that it is comparatively easy to decipher the evidence to find out what killed a fish in the average stream. The inquest must be held soon after the fish's death.

Anglers will remember Dr. Hubbs as the Michigan man who has blazed a new trail in doctoring trout streams and lakes to make them produce more fish. His system of planting snags and logs in trout streams in order to provide cover and create deep holes for the finny tribes, thus adding to the production of the stream, is now acknowledged as a marked forward step in fish culture.

This summer Dr. Hubbs has been examining dead fish to determine how and why they died. The investigation was launched to compare the mortality figures of

WESTLAND WINS KNOLLWOOD GOLF WITH 149 SCORE

Evans, Gardner, Martin Collect Prizes.

Chicago's leading amateur golfers turned out in sufficient numbers at Knollwood's annual invitational tournament yesterday to transform the prize list into an all-star cast headed by Jack Westland of Sunset Ridge. The Chicago district champion had a thirty-six hole score of 74—75—149 for low gross honors for the day.

In the supporting cast were such troupers as Chick Evans of Edgewater, who shot a 73 to win low gross for the afternoon round; Bob Gardner of Onwentsia, who carded 151—4—147 for second low net for thirty-six holes; and Dick Martin of Briergate, whose 37—36—73 was low for the morning round.

Among the other sharpshooters of the district who performed over the Knollwood layout were Jack Lenfesty of Exmoor, star of the University of Michigan golf team; Harry Bishop of Glen View; and George Rasmussen of the home club. Although they did not capture any of the individual prizes they came in for a share of several foursome prizes.

H. Troup of Illinois, who has a handicap of 15, startled himself by shooting an 81 in the afternoon, the best golf, by far, he had ever shot. The round, added to his morning effort gave him a thirty-six hole score of 168—30—138. This total carried with it the first low net prize for the tournament.

Two Ties for Low Net.

Low net for the morning round resulted in a tie between S. T. Whatley and S. T. Brown, both of Knollwood. The former had 85—13—72 and the latter, 86—14—72. Another tie resulted for the low net prize in the afternoon. This was divided between C. B. Hinternhoff and Ralph Sargeant, both of Knollwood. The former has 78—7—71 and the latter 88—17—71.

The low gross foursome consisted of Dick Martin, D. Lahey, George Rasmussen, and Jack Lenfesty. Their combined score was 622. The low net foresome was composed of H. H. Taylor, Jack Westland, Bob Gardner, and George Harrington. They had a score of 657—40—617.

H. Troup, Illinois	168	30	138
Jack Westland, Sunset Ridge	149	0	149

Armstrong's 74 Low Gross in Fox Chase

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

One hundred and fifty golfing huntsmen spurred their clubs to the chase and shouted "Yoicks!" and such in the fourth annual Fox Chase of the St. Charles Country club yesterday, but it was Don Armstrong of Aurora who came closest to running down old Reynard Par when the hunt finally ended on the picturesque 18th. Don assembled a pair of 37's for a gross of 74, the best of the day. Next in line was Johnny Van Nortwick of Chicago Golf, who had a 76. Joe Durstock, with an 80, and A. J. Cranna, with an 82, were the leaders among the members.

Par—Out	434	534	454—36
Par—In	445	443	443—35—71
Armstrong—Out	534	425	464—37
Armstrong—In	445	453	543—37—74

Hough's 67 Is Low Net.

George Cassell of Fox Valley, Batavia, led the visitors in low net with 82—14—68, E. A. Judd of Glen Flora coming home with 101—33—68 for second.

Armstrong and Van Nortwick took a second helping of the prize assortment, one of the choicest seen hereabouts this year, as members of the low gross foursome, which also included Dr. O. Stader of the home club and Hank Bowbeer of Acacia. Their total was 315. They finished several lengths in front of three St. Charles members, P. S. Nichol, D. C. McCornack, and C. T. Pike, and Roy Albach of Glen Oak, who had 343 for second place.

O'CONNELL WINS FROM WALLACE IN CITY TENNIS

George O'Connell, the top ranking player in the draw, defeated Lloyd Wallace of Elkhart, Ind., 6-4, 9-7, but was forced to extend himself to win.

Eugene Quinn of Hamilton Park scored the biggest upset of the day, routing Frank O'Connell, former Big Ten singles champion, in a battle that ended 6-3, 2-6, 11-9. O'Connell, tiring in the last set, faltered long enough for Quinn to break through his service for the final game.

Other players who reached the quarter-final round were Leo Lejeck, William Parkhill, Carl Ireneus, Charles Lejeck, Thane Halsted, and Muir Rogers.

Battling for the women's title opened yesterday, with favorites gaining easy victories. Jackie Ayer, ranked second in the draw, drew a bye in the first round, but took to the courts later in the afternoon to defeat Stephanie Zalmiski, 1-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Catherine Wolf sent Mary Naughton down in a maze of placements, 6-0, 6-1. Mrs. Florence Wittleder in the other important match routed Dorothy Gilbert, 6-1, 6-0.

Ralph Richards, Tennis Star's Kin, Slain in Holdup

New York, Aug. 4 [Thursday].—[Special.]—Ralph Richards, a half brother of Vincent Richards, the tennis star, was fatally wounded and taken prisoner with two companions in a fight with police in a Manhattan street last night after the three had committed a $12 holdup in Brooklyn. Richards was taken to Roosevelt hospital, where he died early this morning.

With three other men Richards escaped from Eastview penitentiary on July 16 and had eluded search until last night's escapade.

which probably explains why trouble caught up with him in the fourth. He turned in such choice items as the fanning of Ruth to close the first and the whiffing of Gehrig to open the second. He didn't yield a hit in either of these two innings. In the third, however, the Yanks began getting the range. Jorgens singled with one out and Combs did the same thing with two out. Combs did the Sox a favor by trying to skip to second when Kress fumbled momentarily. Red recovered in a hurry and his peg to Appling killed off the ambitious runner.

Sewell Starts Trouble.

The bad news for Lyons in the fourth began to spread when Sewell opened with a single to left. Ruth spurned the low, inside balls thrown to him by Lyons and walked. A fly to Funk was Gehrig's effort. A pass to Lazzeri jammed the bases. Chapman spanked a single to left, scoring Sewell and Ruth. Then Crosetti lined to Seeds and Lazzeri didn't make allowances for the power of Seeds' arm. The latter cut loose with a bulletlike peg and Lazzeri couldn't get back to second in time to beat the ball.

Batting by the Sox during the first four innings was restricted to two hits. Blue singled to inaugurate the third but didn't get anywhere. Seeds tripled with two gone in the fourth and he too died on the spot to which his hit carried him. Then came a slight improvement in the shape of a run in the fifth. Appling started it with a single to left. Kress and Blue came through with the inevitable pop-ups and just when it looked as if Appling's hit would go to waste, Grube thumped a two bagger to right center. Appling scooted over the plate on it and with Lyons' soft tap to Ruffing the incident was completed.

The Sox had another delightful opening in the sixth but couldn't make use of it. Funk blew open the inning with a single to right. Hayes bunted and was across first base before Jorgens could retrieve the ball. Both men moved up on a sacrifice by Seeds. Selph bounced to Sewell and, after the customary dashing up and down the base lines, both Funk and Hayes found themselves anchored on third. The bag belonged to Funk, so Hayes had to get out of there. Then a double steal was attempted while Ruffing was holding the ball, but he woke up in time to nail Funk at the plate.

Lazzeri gave everybody in the place quite a thrill in the eighth. Combs and Sewell were set down and Lyons figured there was no use taking any chances on Ruth. He walked him. Gehrig banged a hard grounder toward Hayes, who over ran the ball. It hopped past him for a double, Ruth halting at third. Lazzeri then boomed a long fly to left. Seeds ran along the wall in a way that indicated the ball was headed for parts unknown, but Seeds stuck with it and it finally came down into his hands a matter of inches outside the foul line.

When Lyons stepped up in the eighth to launch his scheme for getting the tying run around to the plate he ran his string to 3 and 2 and then lined his double to right center. Ted hastened to third on Funk's bunt. Jorgens then gave the Sox a break. He dropped a tip foul that, if held, would have concluded Hayes' appearance at the plate. In order to show he appreciated this little matter, Hayes slammed a long fly to Chapman and Lyons sprinted home on the play. Seeds looked at a third strike to end the inning. Then the finishing touch in the tenth.

Grimm Names Woody English Cubs' Captain

departing Hornsby. Rogers spent the day in the lobby of the hotel chatting affably to players as he waited for a 6 o'clock afternoon train that was to bear him to his estate, located in the same county as that of his successor.

Hornsby has been known to growl a bit on one or two previous departures, but his words today were friendly—wishes for Cub success this season.

There will be no immediate changes in the Cub battle array, which has been more approved by President William Veeck than by Hornsby. Hemsley and Hartnett will alternate as catchers and Moore and Demaree will alternate in right field. Grimm will stand pat on all other positions, including first base.

Double Header Tomorrow.

The postponement today made possible the scheduling of a double header between the Cubs and Phillies Saturday, with single games tomorrow and Friday.

None of the Cubs went to the Philly park today, but Dr. Andy Lotshaw, the Cubs' trainer, and his trunks were there during the daily Philly roll call. He reported the Phils in unprecedented high spirits as a result of their sweeping the series with the first place Pirates.

Chuck Klein told Andy that Third Baseman Pie Traynor of the Pirates wore a counting device on his wrist to keep track of the men who passed third base. In one of the early innings Pie said to Chuck, who was on third, "Aren't you the same fellow I saw here a few minutes ago?" and Chuck replied, "The same fellow, and I'll be visiting you a couple of more times before the game is over," and he kept his word.

Klein also said that Manager George Gibson of the Pirates has a sore arm, developed from waving pitchers in from the bull pen.

Old Timers' Cricket Team Beats Oak Park, 161-107

The Old Timers' cricket team defeated the Oak Park club of the Illinois Cricket association, 161 to 107, in an exhibition match yesterday at Oak Park's field. E. G. Harburg starred for the victors, scoring 35 runs for eight wickets.

Shires Placed on Voluntary Retired List

Boston, Mass., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Art Shires, the Boston Braves' colorful first baseman, today asked Kenesaw M. Landis to be placed on the National league's voluntary retired list. The ball player's application was approved by President Emil Fuchs.

Fuchs, who has been touring the baseball by-ways for several days in search of a replacement for Shires, said he would pay Arthur his full salary and in addition would provide him with funds to obtain the best possible medical treatment for his injured knee.

This injury, received early in the season in a collision with Joe Stripp of Brooklyn, has handicapped Shires to such an extent he was benched in favor of Randy Moore, Braves' utility man.

Manager Bill McKechnie tried to trade Shires to a minor league outfit said to be the Chattanooga club of the Southern association, but the players balked at the deal. McKechnie was so exasperated he gave Shires his unconditional release, but recalled it on President Fuchs' orders.

Fuchs informed Shires of his decision in a kindly letter which advised him to make immediate application for retirement to the commissioner of baseball. Shires, with unconditional release hanging over his head, lost no time accepting the offer for he appeared doomed to further minor league activity.

GIRLS' TEAM BIDS FOR TROPHY IN TRIBUNE SWIM

Larrabee Y. M. C. A. Will Enter Group of 8.

Maxine Reinhard, director of women's athletics at Larrabee Y. M. C. A., yesterday entered a team of eight girls in THE TRIBUNE'S third annual 100 yard free style swimming championships which will be held at the Lincoln park lagoon Aug. 14. "These girls," Miss Reinhard says, "are swimming regularly for the North avenue-Larrabee Y. M. C. A."

Miss Reinhard's team, which will compete in four of the five age divisions for girls, will have an excellent chance to win the team trophy. First place in each of the ten 100 yard races [five for girls and five for boys] will count five points. Second place scores three points and third place one point. The Larrabee entries are:

Class E, Violet Falkner; Class D, Elizabeth Falkner; Class C, Elsie Falkner, Dorothy Frederieksen; Class B, Henrietta Van Brussel, Eleanor Klomen, Mary Platt, Lorraine Moffet.

Many Will Compete for First Time.

THE TRIBUNE races primarily are for novices, although all amateurs regardless of ability, may compete. Of the hundreds who are expected to swim, many will be competing for the first time. For this reason each contestant who reports for the races and swims 100 yards will receive a gold merit button. The amateur spirit is typified by Walter Rotkis of 839 West 33d street. He will compete in Class D for 17 and 18 year old boys. Walter has this to say about THE TRIBUNE races:

"This is my first attempt at a genuine swimming meet and I am desirous of making a good showing. I am green about speed swimming but I have the enthusiasm of the lone Chinese Olympic contender, who, although he went 'washee,' presents an inspiration to me. I'll see what I can do against the field a week from Sunday."

Clinton, Ia., Boy Seeks Medal.

Another entry was received yesterday from Clinton, Ia. Jack Boyle, captain of the high school swimming team last winter is seeking the gold medal in the same class in which Rotkis is entered. Boyle entered last year's meet but could not come to Chicago on the day of the races. But this year he says the gold medal will be his.

Preparations are going on apace at the Lincoln park lagoon. Harry Albrecht, director of small parks and athletics, will have charge of arrangements. Two large barges will be moored in the lagoon, 100 yards apart. Carpenters will construct the platforms at the water's edge for the start. A Lincoln park police detail will handle the crowd, which last year was estimated at 60,000. The facilities of the Lincoln Park Boat club have been put at the disposal of the swimmers by Commodore Theodore Prost.

Many requests have been made for the records made last year. In the near future the best time made for 100 yards in each of the ten races will be printed. Last year's winners are ineligible to compete this year unless they advance to the next higher class.

JOBBER OF RAGS LEAVES MILLION IN CITY BONDS

Wm. H. Kearns' Unsuspected Wealth in Vaults.

A search through the safe deposit vaults of William H. Kearns, a rag and burlap bag jobber, who died on July 19, has revealed that his supposed $150,000 estate exceeds $1,000,000, consisting mostly of municipal bonds.

Yesterday N. J. Bonelli, assistant to the probate judge, approved a $2,000,000 bond for the administrator pending distribution to his only heirs, a brother, Daniel, 616 Waveland avenue, and a sister, Mrs. Rose Fitzgerald, 3823 Gladys avenue. Kearns lived at 1628 Arcade place.

The late Morris Sabath, brother of Judge Joseph Sabath and Congressman A. J. Sabath, left the larger portion of his $50,000 estate to his widow, Jennie, it was disclosed yesterday. His will was filed and approved by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner.

Gives $1,500 to Charity.

Mrs. Sabath was given $24,500, half of her husband's property, after he had bequeathed $1,500 to charitable institutions. The remainder is divided equally among three children, Mrs. Ruth Kaufman, 7344 Ridge boulevard; Mrs. Marcella Wolfson, Lawrence, Kas., and a son, Edgar, 1914 South Ashland avenue.

Mr. Sabath, who was purchasing agent for the sanitary district, died July 16 in an ambulance on the way from his summer home to a Chicago hospital.

Among other wills filed with Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court, and approved yesterday was that of Benjamin L. Jacobs, owner of the Copeland hotel, who bequeathed $50,000 to charitable institutions from his $121,000 estate. Mr. Jacobs died last July 25.

Creates Charity Trust.

His will created a $50,000 trust, the income from which will be divided equally among the following institutions: Adolf Kraus lodge, Emanuel congregation, Willing Workers' club, Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women, and the Marks Nathan Jewish Orphan home. After ten years the trust terminates and the five will divide the principal. Friends and relatives are bequeathed $26,000 more and the residual estate is shared equally by his two sisters and two brothers.

The will of William Posen, president of the Ohio Metal company, also was approved yesterday. His $170,000 estate is placed in trust for his mother, Mrs. Sophie Posen of Los Angeles, Cal. At her death it will be divided between his brothers, Samuel of Los Angeles, and Harry, 2048 Farragut street. Mr. Posen died on June 25.

IDENTIFY 2 MEN FOUND SLAIN ON INDIANA HIGHWAY

Seymour, Ind., Aug. 3.—[Special.]—The bullet riddled bodies of two men, found in weeds on U. S. Federal highway 31, 5 miles south of here, were identified today as Vernon (Sammy) Samuelson, 28, of Chicago, and Fred Sturgill, 32, of Louisville. They are believed by police to have been slain by hi-jackers who escaped with a load of alcohol. Samuelson has been living in Louisville recently.

The bodies were identified by George Hutchinson of Louisville, brother-in-law of Sturgill. Samuelson has a wife and mother living in Chicago. His body was sent to Elgin, Ill., tonight upon instructions from relatives.

It has been established, police say, that the men have been running alcohol from Chicago Heights to Louisville, and one theory is advanced that rival runners may have committed the crimes and escaped with the cargo.

LA SALLE ST. GETS THRILL OF HIGHER PRICES

BY HOWARD WOOD.

New highs for stocks, soaring grain prices and news that Chicago's most important bond offering in months had been heavily oversubscribed yesterday brought some old time action and excitement to La Salle street.

Customers rooms that have been practically deserted for months were jammed to the doors. As board markers chalked up sales showing a succession of substantial gains in such stocks as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Union Pacific and other "blue chip" issues there were shouts from excited watchers. Not since the stock market crash in the fall of 1929 has there been as cheerful a day in board rooms.

Yesterday's bull market came after more than two weeks of rising stock prices. Bond prices have been improving for a month and many commodities have been on the upgrade since June.

How Conservatives Feel.

Even in conservative quarters this upturn is viewed as constructive and encouraging, although the hope has been repeatedly expressed that the improvement would be gradual and fairly slow rather than sudden.

An executive of one of the large banks who was asked to comment on the various price advances of the last month said he regarded them as evidence of public recognition of the fact that many of the bad situations overhanging the market have been cleared up and that the way was open to recovery.

He pointed out particularly the change in the tone of the stock market. For many months any sort of stimulated buying was immediately met by a flood of liquidation. The market was exceedingly thin; people with money to invest were frightened and buying power was simply lacking.

During the last two weeks, this banker explained, the market has given pretty definite indication that the forced liquidation has been largely completed.

"Organizers of a number of pools formed recently to purchase large blocks of stock for a rise," he said, "have discovered to their chagrin that very few shares can be bought before the issue traded in bounds up several points. This situation probably would not exist if any large amount of liquidation remained uncompleted."

Situation in Chicago.

The business outlook throughout the nation, this man believes, can best be understood by considering the situation in a representative community like Chicago.

Here, he said, there still remain a number of conditions to be cleared up, notably the mortgage dilemma, but the worst troubles either have been definitely solved or are on their way to solution.

"We are," he said, "in the position of sailors on a vessel which has been buffeted about and damaged by a storm. Sails have been blown away, some of the masts have snapped off, the decks are strewn with wreckage, and there are some minor leaks, but the storm is subsiding and, with hard work, we should soon be able to get things shipshape."

This man believes that if the bond market continues for another month or two the improvement shown during the last four weeks the real estate mortgage market will begin to show signs of life. Not that the 6 per cent real estate bond will get back its lost standing, but good earning properties may again attract the funds of insurance companies and trust funds.

Talks of Bond Market.

Another well informed individual, the head of one of the largest investment banking firms, yesterday expressed the opinion that the improvement in the bond market probably would encounter a setback or two, but that there would be no sliding back to the June lows.

The stock market splurge has somewhat obscured the great gains made in certain classes of bonds, especially the issues of smaller and less widely known concerns. Gains of 25 to 50 per cent have not been uncommon.

One of the outstanding features of yesterday's market news was the spurt in New York and Chicago bank stocks. Issues of many of the leading institutions in the two cities registered new highs for the current movement.

Northern Trust's New High.

Northern Trust soared ten more points yesterday to close at 343 bid, 348 asked, a new high. Continental Illinois was up three points and First National gained a point. Central Republic closed a point higher and Chicago Title and Trust was quoted at 139 bid, 141 asked, at the close, setting a new high and registering a gain of 11 points for the day.

His Uncle Sam Guards Indian Blanket Trade

BY SCRUTATOR.

The power of the federal government is being exerted to protect the poor Indian against insidious trade practices of the white man. A late "release" by the federal trade commission, whose main function is to prevent unfair trade practices, leaves no doubt that it has taken up the "white man's burden"—unless that burden has now become taxation.

But let's get on with the story. It seems that a Massachusetts concern was making blankets by machinery, following Indian colors and designs. It labelled such blankets by various Indian names, such as "Wigwam," "Sachem," "Agawam," and "Huron." It advertised its goods by means of pictures representing, according to the commission, "Indians weaving blankets, loom on which Indian blankets are made, and Indian blankets, and using pictures representing Indians or Indian camping or marriage scenes, or other Indian scenes."

Official Traders Affected.

This company did a gross business of $85,000 in 1930. But now the trade commission has decided that its practices constitute unfair competition with the Navajo Indians, of whom "there are 40,000 in Arizona and New Mexico, carrying on a substantial industry in making blankets. With an annual production worth between $500,000 and $750,000, they sell the blankets mostly to government licensed traders. The annual retail value is between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000."

So the commission decided that "there is a class of the consuming public to whom the name 'Indian,' when applied to blankets, means blankets made by Indians." It ruled it is not sufficient for the Massachusetts company to label its products "Indian blankets" because such advertising "does not convey to a portion of consumer buyers the understanding that the blankets are not made by Indians."

More Details of Findings.

In justice to the Massachusetts company, the commission says that its blankets and those made by the Navajo Indians "do not precisely fill the same commercial wants."

"The evidence shows," the trade commission continues, "that the purpose of the respondents' use of false pictures is not to injure the sale of the Indian blankets, but to increase its own sales. The practice nevertheless is a competitive practice in the course of commerce as defined in the federal trade commission act and does not result in injuriously affecting the blanket industry of the Navajo Indians."

So the commission ordered the eastern company to stop advertising its wares by means of pictures and the use of the word "Indian" without proper qualifying words to show clearly that its blankets are not made by American Indians.

Now, you see, the Navajo Indians are thoroughly and perhaps rightfully protected. But there is another item in the report that suggests the American taxpayer may not be quite as well protected.

Wide Scope of Inquiry.

"Testimony in the commission's case was taken in such cities as New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Providence, Albany, Washington, Cincinnati, Battle Creek, Detroit, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Madison, New Orleans, Asheville, N. C., Galveston, El Paso, Albuquerque, Santa Fé, Gallup, N. M., Omaha, Denver, San Francisco, and Los Angeles," the report says. "Among witnesses were department store salesmen, Indian traders, and consumers."

Thus, the hearings covered about all of the continental United States. What they cost is not stated, although that might be interesting.

Burlington Substitutes Buses for 6 More Trains

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Motor buses have forced discontinuance of six more passenger trains of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy railroad, the Illinois commerce commission announced today in authorizing substitutions on the line between Rockford and Rochelle, serving Camp Grant, New Milford, Davis Junction, Holcomb, and Kings. Motor buses will be operated by the Burlington Transportation company, a subsidiary of the railroad, at an annual saving, it was estimated of $11,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 3.—The public, consisting of small buyers throughout the country, appeared to be back in the stock market today. Prices of stocks on the New York exchange shot upward at a merry clip. Most of the pivotal stocks gained two to seven points, meaning $2 to $7 per share. The advance was the best since 1929.

That made some observers wonder whether another bull market has arrived, or whether the advance was inspired by the big boys in Wall street. Others insist the advance of the last few weeks, which reached a new peak in today's wild burst of trading, has been spontaneous, mainly due to more favorable business signs and to the reentry of the public into stock buying.

The opinion was expressed by some during the day's early trading there was hesitancy in the market, but when big money began to flow in, there was a wild scramble to buy stocks.

Motors Dividend Helps.

Rumors that large pools of operators were busy pushing prices of certain stocks up, in the expectation of unloading later upon the "public," were discounted to some extent by the course of events which usually influence the market.

For instance, there was authentic information that contrary to previous expectations, the directors of General Motors would declare the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, despite the fact that earnings for the second quarter did not warrant the payment. Market operators took this to mean that General Motors sees more favorable business signs just ahead, and therefore would dip into surplus to pay the current dividend. After the market closed, the General Motors directors took the expected action.

Another influence as cited was the brisk rally in wheat prices on the Chicago Board of Trade. The rise in wheat was accompanied by Wall street rumors that the federal farm board had completed the disposal of its huge holdings. This rumor later was denied in Washington. Meantime its effect had already been spent on the stock market.

Best Rise Since 1929.

Whatever the explanation may be, the gains for the entire period of the current movement have been the widest since the recovery which followed the market collapse in the fall of 1929, but the gains there were not held and declines soon followed. Measured by the combined averages of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE the appreciation in market values from the low of the year to the high mark today has been about 48 per cent.

These averages showed a net gain today of $4.46, while 25 industrials rose $7.31 and 25 railway issues $1.60. The total turnover on the stock exchange was 2,400,000 shares.

Most of that trading was concentrated in the last three hours. There was a rush of buying in the last few minutes, and so greatly were the trading facilities congested that the stock ticker, for the first time in weeks, fell behind.

A. T. and T. Leads Market.

American Telephone and Telegraph was the leader of the day's advance. This issue closed at 96¼ with a net gain of 7 points. Today's close was 26 points up from the low of the year. United States Steel common, a contender for the leadership, ended the day with a gain of 3¾ points, United States Steel preferred was up 5⅛, Western Union 3, United States Industrial Alcohol 3½, Union Pacific 6, Sears Roebuck 3, Norfolk and Western 3¾, Peoples Gas 4¾, Eastman Kodak 4¾, Drug, Inc., 5, Delaware and Hudson 5, International Business Machines 5½, Coca-Cola 5, Allied Chemical 6⅜, American Tobacco 6½, Auburn 5⅞, and J. I. Case 5⅜.

In the bank stock market there was an extreme gain of 55 points in the bid price of First National shares. Guaranty Trust shares rose 27 points; Chase National, 2¾; National City, 5 points, and Bankers Trust, 5½.

The bond market moved along with stocks. Led by the railway issues, the General Domestic corporation list showed net advances that ranged from 1 to 5 points.

Edison Bond Issue All Sold; Demand Exceeds the Supply

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The speedy sell out of the $18,000,000 Commonwealth Edison company bond issue yesterday was regarded as one of the most heartening developments in the financial markets in months. The quick oversubscription was one of the features of a particularly cheerful day in the financial community.

The reception given the Edison bonds means an early marketing of the $20,000,000 Peoples Gas Light and Coke company bond issue according to views expressed yesterday in banking quarters. It is expected that formal announcement will be made today that the Peoples Gas issue will be put on the market early next week. The Peoples Gas issue will be the second step of the refinancing program for the trio of Chicago utility companies formerly under Insull management.

Close Books Before Noon.

Representatives of the banking syndicate which offered the Edison bonds announced before midday that buying orders exceeded the available bonds and the books had been closed. The bonds were offered at 93 to yield about 6 per cent to maturity in 1962. The issue was commanding a premium in the open market of 1⅜ points during the day. On the New York curb the issue sold at 94⅜c.

With the present bonds outstanding the total mortgage debt of Commonwealth Edison is $177,513,000 as against an investment in plant, property, rights, and franchises of $308,865,000. Amortization and retirement reserves aggregate $48,904,769.

Governors of the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday listed the new issue on a when, as, and if issued basis. Trading will begin today on that basis.

Peoples Gas Bonds Next.

The proposed Peoples Gas issue consists of $20,000,000 first mortgage and refunding bonds due in 25 years. Under the amended application approved by the Illinois commerce commission the company has authority to issue the bonds with a 5½ or 6 per cent coupon.

If the Peoples Gas financing is accorded the same reception as the Edison bonds, as is confidently expected by bankers, it will be followed by public offering of $20,000,000 of first lien and refunding mortgage bonds of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. The latter firm is the third largest Chicago district utility company which operates in the suburban area.

The bulk of the $65,000,000 of funds which were released to investors through the redemption of maturing securities of these companies is finding its way back into the new bonds, bankers report. Each of the new issues carry a higher coupon and are being sold at prices giving a substantially higher yield.

MOTORS TO PAY ITS REGULAR 25C DIVIDEND

Two More Standard Oils Fall in Line.

General Motors corporation yesterday declared the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents a share on its common stock. At the same time the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 on the preferred stock was declared. The dividend on the common is payable Sept. 12 to stock of record Aug. 13, while the dividend on the preferred is payable Nov. 1 to stock of record Oct. 10.

The announcement of their action was made after the close of the market. At the close General Motors common was selling at 12, an advance of 1½ points.

The report for the June quarter, already published, showed 7 cents a share earned on the common stock for that period. Earnings for the first half of the year were equivalent to 24 cents a share.

The present common stock was

WHEAT RISES AS RUMORS FLY IN GRAIN PITS

Milnor Denies Story of Big Sales.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Soaring grain markets were witnessed on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday, with wheat regaining in about two hours over half of the loss sustained during a five day straight decline which carried the December off to 51½c early Wednesday, or 5c under the outside figure of last week.

It was a day of wild rumors. It was noticeable, however, that the rumors were not in evidence until wheat prices had advanced about 2c from the early low.

The December touched 54¼c on the advance, or 2¾c over the early low with stop loss orders uncovered on the way up and sellers of offers were forced to protect themselves on the bulge. Profi. taking failed to check the upturn, and the finish was within a fraction of the top with net gains of Reports on three more Sheridan Trust and Savings bank defaulted bond issues were made public yesterday by Arthur Wirtz, chairman of the bondholders' protective committee. The largest of the three is the $130,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bond issue against the Mammoth garage, 4628-46 Clifton avenue. This has since been paid down to $115,000. The receiver, Alexander Weiss, reports cash on hand on May 11, 1932, was $2,508. The members of the protective committee, in addition to Mr. Wirtz, comprise Ernest Ridgeway, receiver for the bank; John P. Hooker, O. P. Curran Jr., August Torpe Jr., and William Ray Prince.

ERNEST RIDGEWAY.

From Dec. 11 to 31 of last year the receiver operated the property. Since that time the building has been leased and the receiver's operating statement to date follow:

	Rental income.	Operating expense.	Net.

No fees have been charged as yet by the receiver or the receiver's attorney. No funds have been allocated as yet for payment of back taxes which are in default. Taxes for 1928 were $2,700, of which only $500 was paid on account and the balance contested. Taxes for 1929 were $3,200, of which the whole amount was contested. No payments have been made on 1930 taxes.

Leavitt-Lincoln Garage.

Eli Metcoff was appointed receiver for the Leavitt-Lincoln garage at 4338 North Leavitt street on May 5. He has not yet submitted a report. This was a $27,500 bond issue at 6½ per cent, reduced to $26,500, when the default occurred. A foreclosure suit was filed and bonds called for deposit. On June 9 practically all were in hand and it is hoped by the committee that all will be deposited so a reorganization can be effected without completing the foreclosure. The garage has a capacity of ninety cars.

Edwin V. Burke, receiver for the Willnor apartments, containing twenty-eight units, at 4014 North Albany avenue, makes the following operating statement:

October, 1931	$ 308	$134	$ 174

The Willnor bond issue was for $100,000 at 6½ per cent. This had been paid down to $90,000 when default occurred. The building was reported 75 per cent rented on June 1, 1932.

Straus Bank Made Depository.

J. Milton Trainer, chairman of the bondholders' protective committee for bonds underwritten by the Cottage Grove State bank, announces that the Straus National Bank and Trust company has been appointed depository. Johnson & Swanstrom have been retained as counsel for the committee. The committee maintains an office at 7527 Cottage Grove avenue.

"The committee is making very satisfactory progress," said Mr. Trainer, who is a partner of Clark & Trainer, realtors. "Each issue is being studied and appraised. A definite plan will be formulated for each building and the bondholders will be advised before the adoption of any plan."

GENERAL MOTORS ORDERS REGULAR DIVIDEND OF 25C

Two More Standard Oils Make Payments.

issued Jan. 7, 1929. It consists of 43,500,000 shares of $10 par value each. The initial dividend on the stock was 75 cents a share, and that rate was continued until the March quarter of this year, when the rate was cut to 50 cents a share. A further cut to 25 cents a share was made in the dividend payable last June.

Today's action means the distribution of $10,750,000 to stockholders of the corporation.

The big corporation earned 7 cents a share on the common stock for the second quarter of this year, but the cash position of the organization is strong and reports were current in financial circles that the regular dividend would be paid. Earnings for the first half of 1932 were 24 cents a share on the common stock of which there are 43,500,000 outstanding.

Two Standard Oils Pay.

Two more Standard Oil companies were added yesterday to the list of such companies declaring regular dividends this week, with the announcement that the board of Standard of California voted the regular quarterly of 50 cents and directors of Standard of Nebraska authorized the quarterly of 25 cents, the same as in the last quarter when the rate was cut from 50 cents.

The California unit also issued its earnings report for the June quarter showing net income of $3,936,302 after all charges, equal to 30 cents a share on 13,102,900 no par shares, compared with $1,575,358, or 10 cents a share for the June, 1931, period.

For the first half of 1932 net income was $6,916,544 after charges, equal to 53 cents a share, compared with $5,643,368, or 43 cents a share, for the similar period of last year.

Defer Action on Common.

Directors of the Federal Light and Traction voted to defer action on the common stock dividend due at this time, but declared the regular quarterly of $1.50 on the preferred. Heretofore, the company had been paying quarterly dividends of 37½ cents in cash and 1 per cent in common stock on the common.

Munsingwear, Inc., voted to omit the quarterly dividend due at this time. Three months ago the rate was cut from 35 cents to 25 cents a share.

Western Dairy Products, Inc., has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on its series A preferred stock, payable Sept. 1 to stockholders of record Aug. 10.

Drug Pays Regular.

Drug, Inc., has declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1 payable Sept. 1 to stock of record on Aug. 15.

Canada Wire and Cable company, Ltd., has declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the preferred stock, payable Sept. 15 to stock of record on Aug. 31.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 5,000; hogs, 20,000; sheep, 15,000.

Hogs maintained an even keel through most of the forenoon yesterday, and toward midsession prices tilted slightly, holding a higher position long enough to raise the general average price for the day 5c to $4.40. This was the highest since last Thursday. Medium and weighty stock exhibited most strength in the early buying and later continued the rally that started Tuesday, with the finish for 250@350 lb swine 5@10c above the close of the preceding session.

Light weights were not plentiful, but buyers still favor the heavier weights, which got down relatively low at the opening of the week. Underweights ended barely steady after a feeble attempt to rally. Unfavorable reports from other places dampened enthusiasm in light weights toward the close. Some nearby points were 15@25c lower. Fancy 180@229 lb sorted hogs topped the list at $5 again, while $4.90 bought hogs weighing 170@241 lbs. Most of the butcher weights averaging 250@300 lbs cashed at $4.25@4.60, with one lot averaging 264 lbs at $4.70. Prime 367 lb butchers sold at $4.10.

Two Way Trend.

There was a two way trend in the cattle market yesterday. The rank and file held about in line with the general selling of Tuesday, but the plainer kinds started to ease soon after the opening and at the close were slipping into lower ground, while the topnotchers, being acutely scarce, held their own at the start and later commenced to move gradually higher. There was nothing exciting about the trade.

Interest even in the few top grades threatened to cool off at times when only a few eastern buyers appeared, but the proportion of this class is too small for buyers to hope for a saving in costs. Prime 1,160@1,229 lb steers topped the list at $9.50, the bulk of all beef steers going at $7.00@9.00 and plainer kinds ranged down to $4.75 and under. Corn fed sows and heifers got plenty of action at Tuesday's prices, but grassy stock was kept away from and sagged again. The close for butcher stock was very sticky except for a few top grades. Calves managed to start out on a steady basis but the trade ran into a snag before many sales were made and toward the close losses of 25@50c became general.

Lambs Down 25c.

Lambs got a drubbing yesterday and landed on a 25c lower basis soon after the opening. Some considered the trade as much as 50c lower in instances because of the better quality of the offerings. Thirty-two carloads of western range lambs were sorted by packers and shippers at $6.25@6.35, with medium quality at $5.25@5.50 and culls and feeders at $4.50@4.75. Natives changed hands largely around $6.00, the buck lambs getting the usual $1.00 discount and selling around $5.00, while a scattering of top classes to packers reached $6.25, and hand picked lambs to city butchers brought $6.50, the top.

Receipts at Chicago today are estimated at 5,000 cattle, 20,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep, against 4,230 cattle, 20,817 hogs and 13,486 sheep the previous Thursday, and 6,705 cattle, 16,120 hogs and 12,238 sheep a year ago.

WHEAT HIGHER AS RUMORS FLY IN GRAIN PITS

Milnor Denies Farm Board Is Selling.

Deny Farm Board Rumors.

Rumors that the farm board has disposed of its wheat stocks were in circulation toward the last, but were characterized by George S. Milnor, president of the Grain Stabilization corporation, as "sheer bunk."

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington late in the day quoted farm board officials as saying the board now controls approximately 24,000,000 bu of cash wheat actually available for sale, and also controls between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 bu of wheat futures. The cash grain is exclusive of around 45,000,000 bu appropriated by congress for distribution through the Red Cross to the unemployed. The statement was issued in response to the rumors the board had disposed of its holdings.

Eastern Interests Buy.

Aggressive commission house buying which started the wheat market upward yesterday was credited in pit gossip to the reinstating of recently sold out lines, and there was also active buying by local professionals.

According to people who should be in a position to know talk of pool operations in the wheat market are to be greatly depreciated. They claim, however, that there has been good buying of wheat for eastern interests who have also been active on the buying side of stocks. Buying of butter, eggs, sugar, hides, and other commodities is also said to have been under way. Pit traders claim there was indication of scale order buying of December wheat from 53c down on Tuesday and again early yesterday.

Saving of stocks, grain, and other commodities, according to THE TRIBUNE'S informant, has been based to a considerable extent on the belief the public in general has now come to the realization that there is a business depression, after many have sought to deny such a condition existed. With this realization has come the belief that stocks, grain, and other commodities are selling well below their true value. It is expected under such conditions that advances or declines in the markets will precede rather than follow the news.

Crop News Not Factor.

Routine news developments yesterday attracted little or no attention from the trade, and as a whole was generally of a character to have resulted in a lower range. Liverpool closed ⅝@⅞c per bu lower with October at 54c, while Winnipeg was ⅜@1¼c higher with October at 58¾c. It is estimated that exporters have purchased around 2,000,000 bu of Manitobas in the last two days, part of it being secured at a somewhat higher basis as compared with the futures than prevailed of late. There was also talk of business in hard winters, but quantities were not mentioned.

Scattered hedging sales of wheat appeared from time to time during the day, but there was no material pressure on the market at any time, and the recent decline apparently resulted in an oversold condition developing.

Eastern Buying in Corn.

Corn futures caught the bullish enthusiasm which so suddenly developed in wheat and after dipping early to a new low for the season, there was an advance of 1⅝@1¾c from the low point with aggressive buying of December credited to eastern account. Shorts covered freely on the way up, and the close was well toward the top with net gains of 1⅛@1¼c. September finished at 31¾@31½c, December 31⅝@31¾c, and May 35⅞@36c. Crop reports were again favorable with soaking rains in parts of Ohio and Indiana, but were not a factor after the market started upward.

The east bought 145,000 bu of cash corn from local handlers during the day, while purchases of 53,000 bu were made to arrive. With hogs selling at a ratio of 14 to 1 as compared with the price of corn, a leading local crop observer who recently returned from a trip over the country says that feeding operations will undoubtedly be heavy.

Oats sold at a new low for the season early, September touching 16¾c but the market firmed up quickly with other grains and closed ⅛@⅜c higher, September was 17½c at the last with December 19⅝@19¾c and May 23¾c. Rye was 1¼@1½c higher with wheat, with September 32½c and December 35½c at the last.

Grain Board Stirred Up Over Trading Hours

Stock houses largely in favor of an extension of hours on the Chicago Board of Trade held a meeting yesterday afternoon to consider work in its favor. A vote will be taken tomorrow. The head of one of the large private wire houses said after the close: "We are going to work hard for the proposed plan, but I honestly believe we will be defeated by a big vote."

Cash grain interests all over the country have protested against a change in trading hours. The proposed change would keep the board open daily until 2 p. m.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil was quiet, but the undertone was steady with trading confined to the December positions, 4 lots, or 300 barrels, changing hands. The steadiness was due to the firmness of stocks and other commodities, with final prices 3 to 4 cents net higher. Crude oil was 30 bid in Texas and 3¼c nominal in the southeast and the valley. Bleachable spot closed 3.90c; September, 4.06c; December, 4.21c; January, 4.26c, and March, 4.38c.

OCTOBER EGGS HIGHER

Butter and egg futures responded to increased bullish activity on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, October eggs closing ⅝c higher at the year's best figure, while November butter moved up ⅝c. August butter struck a new high at 19¾c, a gain of $168 per car over the last sale. The rise of October eggs started shortly after opening selling had sent the market lower. New buying and short covering was active and the market moved steadily higher. The advance was encouraged by a four market report showing 2,700 more cases of eggs withdrawn than last year. Butter moved up in sympathy with eggs. The four markets showed an inward movement of stocks 230,000 lbs heavier than last year, although production was reported 11 per cent under last year. Buying was moderately active. Sales: Butter, 45 cars; eggs, 152 cars. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

With a revival of buying of wheat by eastern interests and the stock market strong and higher, wheat traders were active buyers of offers. The trade was more nervous than usual regarding the technical position. It was said the eastern interests are not disposed to let the market go to pieces. While the hedging business increases on bulges it may not last long. On the whole the market was regarded as acting better for holders. The feeling, however, is nervous and sharp fluctuations are likely to come at any time.

One of the large pit traders said at the close that for the first time in a long while the news was following the wheat market the reverse of its usual action. This he construed as more favorable to holders.

Bearishness dominates the sentiment in corn, but action of the market as a few traders saw it suggested that it had been oversold and the buying of an unusually large line by one brokerage house absorbed all the offerings and was responsible for an advance of nearly 2c. Action of the market was most unusual as the early decline carried prices down below the bids for this week as well as into those sold for next week. At the close trade ideas were more two sided.

Arthur W. Cutten says, "The world's grain situation is ripe for an advance." All farmers the world over are in distress but false doctrines and abortive action by the farm board stifle the recovery." He thinks that the grain trade has been punished enough.

Chicago was an early seller of wheat in Winnipeg. There were also large spreading operations between the two markets. The late strength in Chicago was responsible for an advance in all wheat markets.
